Delay fixed link, says report

Ferry system still less costly

The Canadian Press

There should be a two-year delay on any decision to build a fixed link connecting mainland B.C. with Vancouver Island, says an expert hired by the provincial cabinet to study the controversial proposal.

Vancouver economic consultant Garth Edge says the ferry system is still financially preferable to a tunnel or bridge, which would cost between $3 billion and $4 billion.

But his 80-page report to Science Minister Pat McGeer also says the government should continue to study a possible link because the economics of the idea will become more favorable as traffic volumes increase.

Edge's report is one of four to be submitted within the next few weeks as part of a $100,000 pre-feasibility study on the proposal.

The plan, proposed by McGeer last spring, is strongly opposed by residents of the Gulf Islands and Vancouver Island. They say a fixed link would destroy their lifestyle.

The other reports project costs between $1.75 billion and $4 billion for a 55-kilometre floating bridge across the strait or a 70-kilometre tunnel.

The two-lane floating bridge as envisaged by McGeer would be designed for motor vehicles and would include sections of submerged tunnels to accommodate shipping lanes.

The bored tunnel would accommodate a double-track railway but make no provision for car traffic.

None of the reports recommend a prefabricated tunnel laid on the ocean floor or suspended below the surface of the strait, proposals favored by some consulting engineers.

Edge projects the province will have to spend $1.2 billion on ferries between the mainland and the island within the next 35 years.

He estimates a five-per-cent return on that outlay, compared with a 3.5-per-cent return from the cost of a fixed link.

Edge suggests detailed studies on the fixed link could be started in two years and construction started in 10 years if the forecasts for tremendous growth in ferry traffic across the strait prove accurate.

He foresees traffic doubling to seven million vehicles and 18 million passengers by 1990.

Claudia Donato, a Victoria woman who is organizing a petition opposing a fixed link, is convinced most of the Social Credit cabinet wants to shelve the idea for a few years.

She says her campaign has garnered more than 7,000 signatures on a petition which she will present to McGeer.

2½-hour rescue effort saves Potholes victim

Rescuers worked 2½ hours to get a youth with multiple fractures from the bed of the Sooke River to an ambulance after a 40-foot plunge Sunday afternoon.

Daniel Philip O'Brien, 17, of 2186 McNeill lost his footing at Sooke Potholes Park, hitting rocks and coming to rest partly in the river.

He suffered two broken legs, a cracked pelvis, cracked wrist and shoulder and a head injury and is in stable condition at Victoria General Hospital.

His mother, Mrs. Rita O'Brien, said the youth remained conscious throughout the ordeal.

Mrs. O'Brien said she hasn't had a chance to talk in detail to her son about the accident but he has told her the moment he fell, it was as if he were watching it happen to someone else.

He told her he had landed like a cat.

The victim's brother, Chris, 20, yelled to people down below, then ran for the parking lot to get help.

The response was immediate.

David Freeman, 1265 Grant, and another unidentified rescuer, carried O'Brien out of the water 15 feet up the bank where another helper gave him first aid.

A doctor was nearby.

"He said the people who administered first aid knew what they were doing. They did just the right things," Mrs. O'Brien said.

A Times carrier for six years, young O'Brien "rattled off all his customers' names" Monday when arrangements were being made for substitute delivery, the mother said.

"All the people who helped deserve to know that through their efforts it came out okay."

Sooke RCMP said they were called at 2:54 by the park ranger, and police and ambulance crew with paramedic John Heavenor attended.

They found O'Brien below a mossy rock ridge where he had slipped while climbing.

The injured youth had tried to grab a tree but missed and plunged over the edge.

The rescue team used a basket stretcher and ropes to get O'Brien up to the ambulance by 5:30.

Potholes Park is a popular place with swimmers, hikers and picnickers. But the river's rocky chasm can be hazardous.

Two weeks ago a woman visitor slipped off a cliff to her death a short distance upstream from where O'Brien went over.

Mrs. O'Brien said people can't be prevented from climbing the rocks but she suggested they might be served with a trail and proper footholds along the edge of the river.

Hurricane churns west kills eight

KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — "Great hurricane" Allen today aimed its 275 km/h winds, torrential rain and thunderous seas at the islands of Jamaica and Hispaniola.

The worst storm to hit the eastern Caribbean in a century left at least eight dead so far in its trail of destruction.

A hurricane watch was in effect for Jamaica and the southwest pennisula of Haiti. Gale warnings remained in effect for the southern sections of the Dominican Republic and Haiti, which make up the island of Hispaniola.

National Weather Service officials said reconnaissance planes recorded the pressure in the hurricane's center at 27.05 inches of mercury, confirming the storm as the worst hurricane to hit the eastern Caribbean in a century.

Hurricane forecaster Paul Hebert in Miami said, "this is certainly one of the most intense storms the Atlantic, Gulf Coast and Carribean has ever experienced." If the storm hits the islands "it will be devastating," he said.

Allen continued to move toward the west-northwest at 32 km/h and was expected to remain on this course. Hurricane force winds extended out 64 kilometres in all directions from the center. Gale force winds extended outward 270 kilometres to the north of the center and 160 kilometres to the south.

On Jamaica, a resort island about the size of Connecticut and with a population of 2.1 million, officials of the Office of Disaster Preparedness called emergency planning sessions to set up shelters.

Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley assured his people emergency plans were being made and offered his country's help to eastern Caribbean islands already struck by Allen's fury.

Advance winds from Allen began to hit Santo Domingo, heavily damaged by Hurricane David last year. Wind-hurled debris damaged roads in the bayfront area of the city and heavy rains flooded streets in San Cristobal, 16 kilometres west of the capital city of a million people.

Court tells Alcan to obey Ottawa on water flow

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Aluminum Co. of Canada must obey a federal order to release more water into the Nechako River, Mr. Justice Thomas Berger of B.C. Supreme Court ruled today.

Berger said in an eight-page judgment, on a request by the federal government for an injunction, that the government has shown it has a right under the Fisheries Act to make such an order.

"Alcan has not flouted the law," the judge wrote. "It has simply said, on legal advice, that it believes the minister's order is unconstitutional.

"I have reached the conclusion, however, that Alcan must obey . . . there will be an order directing Alcan to comply with the minister's directive."

Berger said the dispute was one which could not be swiftly or easily resolved but he said someone must have the power to determine the discharges of water that will be necessary.

"The question is whether the minister or Alcan should exercise that power. The minister represents the public interest. The power ultimately must be his."

Berger said an additional matter was that the order purports to regulate discharges of water through the Skins Lake spillway until June 30, 1981, with rates of discharge laid down in advance for the whole period.

He said the 8,000 cubic feet a second discharge for the period ending Aug. 20, the time with which the injunction was concerned, seems to be reasonable to protect the fish and flood the spawning grounds.

Berger said if it appears the discharges required by the minister after Aug. 20 are unnecessary, the order would not be in force.

Carter counter-attacks over 'Billygate' affair

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Jimmy Carter, threatened by accusations of scandal and incompetence, mounted a major counter-attack Monday night against his accusers and his political critics.

In a detailed report to the U.S. Congress and an hour-long news conference on television, Carter said that neither he nor any member of his administration "violated any law nor committed any impropriety" in connection with his brother Billy's performance as a lobbyist for Libya.

He also served notice, one week before the Democratic national convention, that he will fight for the right to seek another presidential term as chosen candidate of his party in the Nov. 4 election.

At the same time, Carter conceded he had made mistakes in handling the Billy Carter case. He left open questions about his judgment in the affair. And he acknowledged that he trails seriously in popular political favor just three months before the election.

Asked as he left the White House news conference whether he believes his effort has put the suggestion of scandal to rest, the president replied:

"I don't know. It depends on how you all handle it and how the American people judge it."

Billy Carter, who watched the president's statements on television at a motel in Americus, Ga., said his older brother spoke the truth. But he declined the president's implicit invitation during the news conference to disclose what he has done with the $220,000 he has received from Libya, payments Billy has described as part of a loan but which helped generate the political uproar during the last three weeks.

Asked how he feels now about his relations with the North African country he promoted during the last two years — he registered

Hanging judge Nobel?

BEIRUT (UPI) — Iran's "hanging judge," Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, says he is as good a candidate for the Nobel Peace Prize as all the world's police chiefs put together.

Khalkhali, the roving Islamic judge and author of dozens of summary death warrants, said he has been recommended for the Nobel Prize by "several prestigious Americans."

In Sweden, chairman of the Nobel Committee John Sanness said "no comment" when asked if Khalkhali had been nominated for the prize. He said the committee does not confirm the names of nominees.

Murder story in contest may be the real thing

TORONTO (CP) — New York City police have appealed to The Star to help seek a man who may have committed a brutal murder and then sent the paper a story about it.

Robert Callan, an investigator with the police, appealed to The Star last week following an anonymous entry into the newspaper's annual short story contest.

The story, entitled Motiveless Murder Relic, tells how the author cut the throat of a woman he had gagged and handcuffed in a basement apartment in 1977. The location is New York City, where of 1,557 murders recorded that year, 650 have not been solved.

As one of hundreds submitted to The Star, the story was so realistic that the newspaper consulted several psychiatrists and a psychic as well as sending it to New York City Police. Because Callan is one of 50 investigators working on the murder of Canadian violinist Helen Mintiks and has been ordered to remain on the Mintiks case, it may be a while before he has a chance to check the authenticity of the story.

"I pulled the knife through her throat," it begins, before going on to describe the sights and sounds with accuracy that startles medical experts.

"He certainly has some anatomical knowledge of what happens if you cut someone's throat," said one doctor.

After describing how the life ebbed from his victim's body, the author says he removed his rubber gloves, showered the blood off his body and took a bath.

In the six-page text, the author describes his life, his schooling and his best friend, a dog, which was shot by his father. References in the story describe the author as 30 years old at the time of the murder — Dec. 31, 1977 — and staying on the 7th floor of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. Another reference says the author arrived in the city a week earlier.

The only clue to his personal life is revealed during the paragraphs analyzing the reasons for the murder. He refers to the "bottomless perdition of a too early marriage" he once fell into.

Two of three psychiatrists consulted by The Star believed the story was only the product of someone's imagination rather than a genuine case of murder.

But Dr. Jerry Cooper, a Toronto psychiatrist who has been consulted on 30 to 50 murders a year from all over Ontario, says the strong feelings evident in the story could be those of an "explosive" individual.

"Whoever wrote this definitely has something wrong with him unless he is a creative genius," says Cooper.

Brampton psychic Geraldine Smith, currently working on a murder case in Los Angeles, said she believes the story is true, after it was read to her over the phone. Ms. Smith says she detects names and descriptions concerning the case but senses the author has committed suicide.

Man charged in stabbing

A 33-year-old man will appear in provincial court to face charges in a stabbing incident Monday.

Colwood RDCMP siad the victim, George David Clause, 31, of Tofino, is in stable condition with a stab wound to the side.

Police said he was wounded Monday afternoon in what appeared to have been a drinking party at a house in the 1300-block Craigflower.

Dutch, French gain autonomy

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — The Belgian parliament approved a bill today granting partial autonomy to the country's rival Dutch- and French-speaking regions.

The bill, approved by 156 votes to 19, establishes regional assemblies and executives in Dutch-speaking Flanders and French-speaking Wallonia.

But the contentious issue of the status of Brussels, a mainly French-speaking city surrounded by Flemish territory and with a powerful Flemish minority, was not discussed. The future of the capital, destined to become a third semi-autonomous region, will not be decided until 1982.

The new regional bodies will control cultural matters, public health, roads and urban projects. Major decisions on financial policy, as well as military, legal and educational affairs will remain in the hands of the central government.

But political sources said the exclusion of Brussels from the reform, decided by Prime Minister Wilfried Martens when forming his six-party coalition just more than two months ago, has sharply reduced its value by postponing discussion of Belgium's most-divisive issue.

The store owners were to appear in court Sept. 11.

Iran throng protests 'torture'

Times News Services

About 250,000 Iranians packed streets around the occupied U.S. embassy in Tehran today protesting allegations that their compatriots in the United States have been tortured by U.S. police.

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr charged the United States with deliberately prolonging the nine-month hostage crisis by jailing 192 Iranians and he called on the prisoners to resist deportation to the point "that they have to drag you into the planes."

The speaker of Iran's parliament announced Monday that because of alleged mistreatment to the Iranians the assembly was postponing its debate on the fate of the 52 hostages. He said the Americans, held for 271 days, should be put on trial to show the United States "we are not scared."

Iran, charging the Iranians arrested during a violent July 27 demonstration in Washington were "subjected to the most brutal assaults," officially appealed to the United Nations to appoint a delegation to visit the prisoners.

Two Iranians sued the U.S. government and the District of Columbia for $6.25 million in damages Monday, claiming they were brutally beaten by police during demonstrations eight days ago.

The 192 Iranians are now held in federal prisons in the New York area. Many of them are on a hunger strike and refuse to identify themselves.

U.S. and prison officials denied the Iranians were mistreated and State Department spokesman John Trattner said Washington welcomed a U.N. inquiry into the prisoners' treatment.

In London, 60 Iranians arrested during a demonstration outside the U.S. embassy appeared in court today and, like the Iranian demonstrators detained in the United States, refused to give their names.

The Iranians, some giving clenched-fist salutes and threatening to start an immediate hunger strike, were ordered kept in custody until next week.

Tehran Radio said Bani-Sadr sent a message to the Iranian Islamic Society in the United States and Canada, telling the prisoners that Iran supported them.

The speaker of Iran's parliament, Ayatollah Hashemi Rafsanjani, said the assembly had asked the Supreme Islamic Council to make preparations for trials for the American hostages since the Iranians were arrested in the demonstration sparked by the death of the deposed shah.

In a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh charged some of the prisoners "carry the marks of police brutality and some are in serious condition."

He asked in a four-point statement that the United Nations appoint a delegation to visit the prisoners and report on their conditions since Iran had no diplomatic relations with Washigton.

A spokesman at the federal prison in Otisville, N.Y., where 172 Iranians are being held said Monday 32 are being fed a liquid nourishment solution because their prolonged hunger strike has left them in a "life-threatening" situation.

Tests confirm Legion Disease

TERRACE (CP) — Laboratory tests have confirmed that James Simpson of Terrace is suffering from Legionnaire's Disease.

His is the second confirmed case in western Canada, Dr. William Redpath, his physician, said Sunday. The first, from Salmon Arm, was verified earlier this year.

Simpson was admitted to hospital in this northern B.C. community early in June with a high fever, cough and respiratory problems.

Blood samples sent to a Vancouver laboratory now have confirmed he had Legionnaire's disease.

The name was given to the mysterious illness that caused a rash of deaths at an American Legion convention in Philadelphia in 1976.

Holiday death toll 71

The Canadian Press

At least 71 people died accidentally across Canada during the holiday weekend.

A survey by The Canadian Press from 6 p.m. Friday until midnight Monday night local times showed 47 traffic deaths, 19 drownings, one fire death, one electrocution and three airplane deaths.

British Columbia reported three traffic fatalities and two drownings.

Ontario had 16 traffic deaths and nine drownings, while Quebec reported 17 traffic fatalities and five drownings.

State of B.C. depressing

VANCOUVER — For someone who spends his life contemplating the nation from somewhere over Moose Jaw, the present stance of the Social Credit government is depressing.

When you spend your time flitting from east to west and back again, your major occupation is defending British Columbia from the assaults of the smug inhabitants of central Canada.

The belief that the province is populated almost exclusively by faith healers, foot fetishists and open-mouth radio hosts is strongly held along the banks of the Rideau.

For someone to suggest that the perception is based on worn out myths is enough to bring hoots and jeers at any gathering of more than six.

The Phlying Phil Gaglardis and Tom Terrifics and other esoteric practitioners of the art of politics long ago convinced Ontario and environs that to cover politics in B.C. one first of all had to be equipped with a butterfly net.

W.A.C. Bennett, in his more eccentric moods, helped to convince Ottawa that only parochial tin pots resided in Victoria and ruled the province.

Only on the death of Bennett was there a more sober and objective appraisal and his accomplishments were treated far better in death than when he was in active politics.

Since he left the arena in 1972, there were some of us who tried to convince the non-believers in the far off East that there were a few politicians in Victoria who did not hang from trees and blow their noses with their table napkins.

Bill Bennett himself set out to convince the doubters in the nation's capital that he was collecting around him a crew of modern, professional men.

So today? The cheap hints of quasi-separatist stirrings emanate from the Mini-Wac Camp. Strutting and posturing from Victoria is an almost daily feature now as the Socreds scramble to catch the slipstream of the Lougheed grumbles.

Not only has B.C., as the largest western province, abdicated leadership to Alberta (and there are other factors than money) Victoria now looks like a pale imitation of Edmonton in its echo chamber responses on the national scene.

Bill Bennett, who was once seen in Ottawa as a serious young man dedicated to removing B.C.'s rather scatterhead reputation nationally, now is looked upon as an increasingly desperate man who will suggest almost anything in his nervous bid to stay in power.

There's a perception outside this province (not to mention what is going on in it) that it is now just a matter of time until the patient Dave Barrett and the subdued NDP will be back in power.

There's the perception that Bennett will push his dangerous game as far as he thinks is necessary in order to win votes.

The hints of an imitation-Levesque referendum is so ludicrous that no intelligent observer takes it seriously, but Bennett knows that breed is in rather short supply.

The king's taster in this charade is the emminent Dr. Patrick McGeer, who has been unleashed to vent his increasingly paranoid view about the evil monsters who dwell in Ottawa.

This is no loose-mouthed Vander Zalm, or a delightfully zany Gaglardi, making all those looney little page one brighteners that so please news editors of Toronto papers.

This is Dr. McGeer, one of the senior members of the Bennett cabinet, a man who, as his personal chances for power have receded, has become increasingly aggressive in these free-form ideas he throws about.

A floating bridge through the high tides to Vancouver Island? Cars that run on some strange new substance? Flamboyant satellite discs on the parliamentary lawn? The ideas are flung out, western independence following the others until next week's zippy headlines will reveal yet another McGeer brainstorm.

The Bennett crew is becoming more strident in its hints and mutterings as if realizing at last how far behind it has been left by Lougheed's Alberta.

Premier Bennett said, "B.C. is not for sale."

No, just its reputation.

Superstitions still bloom

VANCOUVER (CP) — People might say spilled salt indicates sloppy table manners and a broken mirror is only shattered glass but the age of superstition is far from over.

"I don't think we've changed that much," says Larry Ward, a psychology professor at the University of B.C.

"I think we are probably just as superstitious about little things, gambling and luck, because these are the things that the average person doesn't understand."

Ward says it doesn't matter whether a rabbit's foot helped your team win the game as long as you act as though it did.

Even those who say they are not superstitious can fall into irrational behavior — like the person who pushes the same elevator button several times although he knows that one touch of the button will get him to the floor he wants.

And there are other people who take their umbrella to work on a sunny day because they just know it's going to rain if they leave it at home.

Horse trainer June Anderson, who wears four horseshoe charms for luck, is serious about superstition when it comes to saddling winners at Exhibition Park race track. She once wore the same suit for three weeks after getting a couple of winners one day.

"I was afraid to wear any other suit."

Ward says that's the law of effect, one explanation for superstition.

"When reinforcement happens, all behavior before that is increased. Sometimes the reinforcement is connected to the behavior and sometimes it isn't."

Shortstop Tim Nordbrook of baseball's Vancouver Canadians of the Pacific Coast League says he's not superstitious but a certain pancake house became a favorite eating place when he went on a recent hitting streak.

"We just kept going back. My wife liked the pancakes and I liked the hits."

Actress Beth Kaplan of the Arts Club says she has to say "good show" to her dresser before going on stage or else "something is going to go wrong."

Gerrie Brooks of the Playhouse theatre company can list many other theatre superstitions.

"There shouldn't be any live flowers on stage or peacock feathers. Of course, you never say good luck. And it's bad luck to put your shoes on the makeup table. They also say if you have a bad dress rehearsal, it means a good opening night but I think that's wishful thinking."

Then there's director Janet Wright who doesn't follow the rituals.

"You know that thing about whistling in the dressing room or saying, 'Macbeth'? The first chance I get, I whistle or say 'Macbeth.' I guess that's my superstition. I hate being a sheep."

Ward says that because something is a superstition that doesn't mean it doesn't work.

"Sometimes the very behavior that we call superstition does have an effect on the person. One of the big problems of people who perform — actors, sports figures — is nervousness. If the behavior of wearing a good luck charm calms the person, it might not be a superstition after all."

Winery going up on Indian land

OLIVER (CP) — The 170-member Osoyoos Indian Band has reached agreement with the T.G. Bright Co. of Niagara Falls, Ont., to build a winery on band property in the Okanagan Valley.

The band already owns more than 50,000 hectares of prime valley vineyards and has formed an all-Indian company, Inkameep Vineyards Ltd.

Vineyard manager Ted Brouwer said that with the help of federal money, construction of the $1.6 million winery, the sixth in the province, will begin this fall.

"It's a unique 25-year agreement whereby Bright will lease the building, supply the equipment with the band members having first refusal of jobs and also growing the grapes," Brouwer said.

Cost of the equipment, which will be supplied by Bright, is estimated at $3.5 million with initial capacity between 800,000 and 1,000,000 gallons a year.

Most of the 700 tons of grapes the Indians grow each year now are sold to Andres Wines of Port Moody under a contract arrangement Brouwer said is worth close to $150,000 to band members.

THE MANAGEMENT OF ENERGY IN CANADA. ONE OF A SERIES:

YOU COULD BE HEATING YOUR HOUSE WITH GAS FROM THE COLDEST PLACE ON EARTH.

Natural gas under the ice? Twenty years ago we suspected it. Now we've found it. In huge quantities.

We know where it is. Under the Arctic islands and in the surrounding seabeds. Some hot spots: King Christian Island, Melville Island, Ellef Ringnes Island. The most recent strikes were drilled from floating ice islands, three hundred meters above the ocean floor.

We know how much there is – enough to increase Canada's total gas reserves by 20%. Enough to heat every Canadian home for more than 15 years.

To get this far has cost millions, and all Canadians have a stake in the find. The exploration leader is Panarctic Oils Limited. The Government of Canada, through Petro-Canada, owns 45% of Panarctic. The balance is split among 29 companies, most of them Canadian.

Could the gas be moved south by pipeline? Probably – we've built some of the world's biggest.

Could it be moved south by tanker? Yes.

A HOT NEW IDEA TO MOVE ARCTIC GAS.

An unique experiment by Petro-Canada, Alberta Gas Trunk Line and a consortium of shipping firms (called Melville Shipping Limited) is well advanced, and could put Canada in the forefront of Arctic shipping the world over.

Known as the "Arctic Pilot Project", it involves converting the natural gas to liquid, and then moving it to a southern terminal in tankers with massive ice-breaking hulls, capable of moving through ice 2.5 meters thick – and through ice ridges as much as 20 meters thick, 120 meters wide.

Such tankers would have engines five times as powerful as those of present-day tankers carrying liquefied natural gas (LNG). They would have the most sophisticated gear for ice navigation. At their southern terminals, the LNG would be regasified and moved into the pipeline network.

The cost would be high. Each tanker would cost half a billion dollars. And we would need several.

But the payoff could be even higher. The project could help us get off oil – especially from unreliable foreign sources. The planning goes on and it's being done carefully, with close attention to environmental, safety, and market conditions.

This is a Canadian project. It uses Canadian money, public and private, and Canadian people. It's on territory administered by the Government of Canada. It uses Canadian skills, Canadian technology. It's a total Canadian commitment.

Arctic gas is one sign that Canadians have what it takes to achieve their own energy goals. Future ads in this series by Energy, Mines and Resources Canada, will add to the story.

Signs of promise

The most promising signs yet in the battle between the federal government and the western provinces over resource matters came last week when the oil-pricing agreement between Ottawa and Alberta expired.

Negotiations between Prime Minister Trudeau and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, aimed at reaching a new agreement, had broken down with both parties admitting they were a long way apart. Both parties were talking about the possibilities of unilateral action.

It seemed the stage was set for a major confrontation. No matter which party had initiated drastic action on its own, the other would have been bound to retaliate. Had Alberta raised the price of oil to bring it quickly towards world levels, Ottawa might have taken control over all oil and gas resources in the country. Had Ottawa raised the price by only a piddling amount, Alberta might have followed through on an earlier threat to turn off the taps.

Instead, both parties reacted moderately and sensibly to the ending of the agreement. Alberta did unilaterally raise the price, but only by two dollars a barrel. One of the few areas of agreement between the two governments had been that that was a reasonable sum for the price to increase for the rest of 1980.

In response, the federal government, instead of condemning Alberta for taking any unilateral action at all, said only that it could live with a price increase of that magnitude.

The two-dollar increase does not solve any of Canada's long-term problems, either those of energy or those of a constitutional division of powers.

The country has not come to terms with the basic question of whether oil prices should reflect the world price, as Alberta holds, or the costs of production, as Ottawa argues. It has not come to terms with the question of how it is to achieve energy self-sufficiency and of what role a pricing policy should play in that program.

It has not come to terms with the question of how revenue from oil and natural gas should be distributed nor what percentage of the take should be returned for exploration purposes.

And it has not come to terms with the key constitutional question of how the power to regulate and control natural resources should be distributed between the federal and provincial governments.

What the two-dollar increase may show is that it is possible to reach agreement on these issues. It shows that the leaders of the federal and provincial sides are not as militant as their political rhetoric sounds, that they are willing to try to make reasonable compromises to gain mutually satisfactory solutions.

That is good news for the country.

Three good decisions

Credit to the directors of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce for three decisions they made at their last meeting.

The chamber agreed to support the idea of better sewage disposal for the area, to oppose strenuously oil tankers coming into out waters, and to urge the B.C. government to make an immediate decision on a future vessel for the Victoria-Seattle ferry run.

The three issues are closely related to the tourism industry, and the Chamber is right to recognize that action is needed to keep the industry healthy. Special events and good marketing help to draw tourists to the city, but they aren't enough if the transportation schedule to bring them here is awkward or inefficient or if the beaches are polluted with oil or sewage.

The chamber was cautious on the sewage issue, pointing out that the technical complexities of the problem make it difficult for laymen to determine what kind of treatment or disposal would solve the pollution problem.

It was more specific on the other two issues, and both its ideas were sound.

It would like the National Energy Board to hold hearings in Victoria on an application to build an oil port at Port Angeles. This would give residents of this community, likely to be affected by oil spills from tankers visiting that port, a chance to put forward their views. This is badly needed; decisions taken 3,000 miles away in Ottawa do not necessarily reflect the sensitivity of this coast and its residents to the possibility of oil pollution.

Concerning the ferry issue, the Chamber would like the B.C. government to begin an immediate, independent study into the possibility of refitting the Princess Marguerite for a return to the Victoria-Seattle run. Such a study is probably the only way Victorians will ever be sure that the much-loved Maggie is safe for further use.

The chamber's proposals deserve acceptance.

FRED CLEVERLEY

Drought, the real boycott

WINNIPEG — In the seventh-floor executive offices of the Canadian Wheat Board on Main Street in Winnipeg, Senator Hazen Argue's announcement that Canada would no longer support the U. S. grain boycott aimed at the Soviet Union caused scarcely a ripple in the water fountains.

It was not the second part of the Senator's statement — that Canada would not ship more than "normal and traditional" quantities — that persuaded Wheat Board officials there would be no substantial changes in policy to interfere with their operations. More persuasive was the steady flow of conditioned, cool air that circulated through the offices and provided their own personal buffer against one of the hottest, dryest seasons in the prairie record books.

Exports down

The heat and the lack of rain — a situation commonly called drought — would, they knew, provide a more effective boycott against export grain shipments than any political statements from Ottawa.

Since Canada will not be able to ship more than "normal and traditional" amounts this year, and may be hard-pressed to reach these totals, it was left up to the hard-nosed prairie farmers to sift through the Senator's doubletalk and discover what exactly he meant.

As long as Canada officially supported the boycott, prairie farmers were in the position of being able to claim compensation for lost sales. There is no reason why a single part of the economy, and the people in that part, should have to bear the brunt of the financial cost of supporting a national policy such as a boycott.

No boycott and no compensation is a proposition that fits nicely into the present grain shortage and Ottawa's policies, as perceived in the West, of cutting back on anything that hints of Western aid.

Buried in Senator Argue's statements are the foundation stones of what could be a later fight over the compensation already due western farmers for the loss of sales during the period they were subject to political as well as natural restrictions on sales to the Soviet Union.

The senator suggested that the "normal and traditional" level of sales to the Soviet Union were in the neighborhood of five million metric tonnes a year. When the support for the embargo was announced by the previous Clark government, the level was set at 3.8 million metric tonnes.

The Americans have been quick to object to the difference. Howard Hjort, the director of economics and policy analysis for the agriculture department in Washington, has been quoted as saying that the five-million-tonne figure cannot be justified by the record, and may be too much.

Western Canadian farmers will take any criticism of the actual amount of grain sold during the boycott with a pinch of salt, in light of the growing number of reports that U. S. grain companies have been finding ways around their own government's boycott by selling grain to other eastern-bloc countries that most Canadian farmers believe found its way into Soviet storage.

Their concern about the higher figure is its possible use in the determination of any boycott compensation.

In matter of fact, there is widespread belief in the agriculture industry that the boycott cost Canada no sales at all. It may have cost Canadian farmers a bit in price because the world market reacted to the announcement of the boycott by dropping for a period of time, but to justify a claim on this factor would necessitate proof that prices were actually negotiated during the period of depression.

Political decision

Senator Argue realizes that no government in Ottawa could get away with no compensation at all. That is why he has withdrawn from the boycott, but has set his own "normal and traditional" figure. The compensation for "lost sales" will probably be determined largely on a political, rather than on an economic basis.

That is the main reason why the people most closely involved with Canada's support of the U. S. grain embargo lost no sleep over Senator Argue's statement.

The water coolers in the Wheat Board offices will not be rippled by attempts on the part of Board executives to put an interpretation on the words of a man who is responsible for their operation, mainly because he has no colleagues elected from the grain belt.

Victoria Landmarks

The first sawmill in what is now British Columbia was built a quarter of a mile above Parsons Bridge on Millstream, formerly Rowe stream which was named after Thomas Rowe, paymaster of H.M.S. Fisgard. Although construction of the mill was completed by the summer of 1848, a water shortage in the stream delayed operation until late November.

Some of the first lumber sawn was used in a barn at North Dairy farm and the following spring a consignment of lumber was sent to Port Langley.

Around the same time, John Fenton, the millwright, left for the California gold-rush, and William Richard Parsons, for whom the bridge was named, took Fenton's place.

Although it was never intended that the little mill should export lumber, several shipments were sent to California in response to the needs of gold mining. The price paid was $80 per thousand feet. Some of the lumber was shipped to Hawaii.

During the winter of 1854-55, bad weather caused a flood that took away the water-wheel and damaged both the sawmill and the grist-mill which had been built downstream from the sawmill. The wheel was replaced but the days of water power were numbered.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Better doctor than historian

The ruthless media have been too hard on the unfortunate Patrick McGeer, British Columbia minister of communications, who has just performed a valuable public service. As a skilled medical doctor and brain specialist, he has dissected the anatomy of Canada with a precision lacked by his colleagues and other laymen. He has exposed the essential question facing British Columbia and all the provinces. In short, is Canada a winning or a losing proposition?

Dr. McGeer has no doubts on that score. He says British Columbia has suffered only loss since it joined Confederation in 1871. And, he adds, Ottawa had better realize that if any of the provinces want to secede British Columbia heads the list.

A summer's long constitutional argument may perplex most politicians but not Dr. McGeer. His surgeon's scalpel cuts to the bone and exposes the true inwardness of the nation — a rather ghastly spectacle.

Ignorant laymen

So far as British Columbia is concerned, the nation has been a bust, a mistake from the beginning. Naturally, therefore, Dr. McGeer is concentrating his energies on a more practical, winning proposition, a bridge or tunnel to unite Vancouver Island with the mainland while the nation's unity is left to ignorant laymen who have time for such minor problems.

Dr. McGeer knows all about the human brain and is a distinguished expert-on-the-brains-of-whales, a species which the Canadian government plans to destroy along with the national currency. But he knows less about politics, having led the provincial Liberal party toward its extinction and himself into a conservative coalition oddly known as Social Credit. Does he know anything about history or even simple arithmetic?

When it entered Confedeation — by a narrow vote in its primitive local legislature — British Columbia was a colony of Britain, shabby, desperate, and broke after the boom of the Cariboo gold rush. Many legislators saw the remote, infant state of Canada as Dr. McGreer sees it now — a losing proposition. They preferred to join the adjacent, prosperous American Republic.

If Dr. McGeer had then been a member of the legislature doubtless he would have voted for that alternative, a winning proposition. Given his present views, he would have been quite logical.

But the losing proposition, alas, was chosen. British Columbia surrendered the chance to become a state of the republic. If it had made the opposite choice it would enjoy, today, the privilege of electing Jimmy Carter or Ronald Reagan, the extra privilege of defending the Western world, paying the necessary taxes, struggling with racial violence at home, and getting blamed abroad by its foreign allies for grossly mismanaging their joint business and its own.

... nation a bust

Still, if British Columbia made the wrong choice perhaps, after all, it made a few small gains?

Its original price for joining Canada was the CPR which, at latest reports, was still in operation. Later it got two more transcontinental railways (now the CNR), uncounted billions from the federal treasury, great business corporations (whose profits doubled last year), and an affluence very high even by American standards, second only to that of Alberta.

Dr. McGeer's government, indeed, never tires of boasting that it has invented what its costly advertisements call the Good Life (though it simultaneously protests that British Columbia is the abandoned, hungry waif of Confederation.)

All this, of course, is merely shadow politics, a kind of family joke that no native British Columbian takes seriously. But Dr. McGeer and others like him seem to lack a sense of humor or of real politics as distinguished from the ritual charade.

If they knew more they would see that their campaign against the federal government (even though its egregious mistakes offer an easy target) is not a winning proposition as it used to be in earlier times when Ottawa provided a whipping boy for any provincial election.

Times have changed and Canadians take their nation more seriously than ever when it is suddenly threatened by dismemberment. The Quebec referendum, the public opinion polls, and all visible measurements of real politics show that Ottawa-bashing, carried beyond a certain point, is a losing proposition.

History repeats?

If Dr. McGeer had read some modern history he would remember that the provincial Liberal government elected in 1933 destroyed its chance of re-election eight years later by ganging up with a premier of Alberta, William Aberhart, to bash the indestructible government of Mackenzie King. Will this history repeat itself?

Not necessarily. There are wiser men than Dr. McGeer in the Social Credit government and they must wish that he would stick to his scalpel and imaginary bridges, leaving real politics to them.

They know that a separate British Columbia would not survive a decade before it sought refuge in the republic as it nearly did a century ago. They know, too, that in the mind or instinct of Canada (an invisible substance that no surgeon can dissect) there is a constituency for a united nation far greater and more powerful than the constituency of disunion represented by the McGeers and Levesques of unreal politics.

Price differential

I refer to the letter to the editor of the Victoria Times of July 18, comparing food service on the English Channel ferries with that of British Columbia Ferries. Mention was made of the food facilities offered, but no mention was made of price apart from the fact that the food was "expensive".

If British Columbia Ferries charged the level of transportation rates for the Mainland/Vancouver Island routes as is charged for the English Channel routes of similar length, there would be opportunity to cross-subsidize food service from fares. Our philosophy is to provide maximum subsidy to the transportation cost as distinct from subsidizing food services, which are a matter of individual choice.

At the moment, there is a fare "price war" on the English Channel ferries which the state-owned Sealink Ferries initiated in competition with private enterprise. A sample of this "price war" is that from March 1, 1980, a standard North American car (over 12½ feet in length) will cost only $108 return on weekdays and $133 return on weekends. If you book for July or August before March 1, the fare is only $67 return on weekdays and $92 return on weekends. Driver and passenger fares are additional and the 1980 Sealink fare schedule indicates an adult passenger fare is $15 one way. Sealink made a profit last year of $25 million.

The difference in philosophy between two government-owned corporations may be summed up thus, from the point of view of a user who is also a B.C. taxpayer: in B.C. $26 return for a car and driver plus the cost of a sandwich and coffee onboard ship and $50 million taxpayer subsidy; in Britain, $158 return for a car and drive plus the cost of a steak dinner onboard ship and a contribution of $25 million to taxes. — C. Gallagher, General Manager and Chief Executive Officer, B.C. Ferry Corporation.

Looking for room

During the past week I have been trying to find accommodation for a friend's daughter and husband and their two children, aged five and seven years. My friend has not the room to put them up, but the visitors naturally eat all meals together with the mother.

Having exhausted newspaper ads for a one week's stay except at high, ridiculous rates, I consulted the tourist bureau only to be told that the name of private homes that were willing to take travellers — even excellently recommended and vouched for — could not be given out until no motel and hotel rooms were available.

How ridiculous is this ruling! There must be thousands of families in Victoria who would be eager to earn some money this way. Why should there be this restriction?

When the Stratford (Ontario) Theatre was in its infancy (a tent served them as a theatre) many families opened their homes at low cost to strangers in order, of course, to promote the Shakespearian plays. There was no mention made of the audience trying first to gain admittance to a hotel. True, times have changed and one must be very cautious as to whom they give their house key to, but this issue was not mentioned to me. Why are the hotels and motels encouraged to fill their tills to overflowing while folks such as my friends are literally walking the streets (they have no car) in search of a place to lay their heads at night where they do not have to pay at least $40 daily. — Mrs. K. Coulthard, 308-15 Gorge Road East.

Why I am a word watcher

This column has been appearing with grim regularity for 18 months; at such a milestone and with a vacation in the offing, a personal word might be in order for those readers who have been breaking their heads trying to figure out where I came from and where I am taking them.

Although self-doubt has never been my problem and strong opinions on any subject spring readily to mind, I was not altogether certain I had the credentials for this job of Language Maven, Word Wizard, Pronunciation Arbiter and Usage Dictator. Before taking over here in Oz, I had written word-watch articles for The New York Times Magazine. As Noah Webster would have said: "Samuel Johnson, that's not."

Moreover, I am the sort who worries about whether "breaking their heads," as used in the opening sentence of this introduction, is too slangy for a literary style, or if whether should not be if earlier in this sentence. Since scratching their heads is permissible to signify puzzlement, and since breaking their heads is in current use, but is more vivid and not such a cliche, I say to go ahead and use it. As to if-whether: When an alternative is implied, whether is preferred. Thus, "whether 'breaking their heads' . . . is too slangy" is correct, because the writer is obviously wondering whether or not. Later in that sentence, I wrote "or if whether should not be if," which is wrong — it should be "or whether whether should not be if," because I am still talking about a choice. Rule: Use whether to signify a choice, if to indicate a general possibility or doubt.

Where do I come off, tossing about such terms as "permissible," "correct" and "wrong" in the previous paragraph? Who is to say what is "permissible" and what is not? Russell Baker wrote of the Great Mentioner, the secret source responsible for candidates' being "mentioned for president." On that analogy, where is the Great Permitter who prefers "if" for the conditional, "whether" for the alternative?

As Casey Stengel used to say: "You could look it up." That's what I did, in a half-dozen usage books. The authorities did not completely agree — Great Permitters display degrees of permissiveness — and so I had to think it over. My imperative, authoritative ruling, "Use 'whether' for choice, etc.," is based on what the other usage writers say as amended by what I think.

Now to the question I asked myself before undertaking this enterprise, and which has been posed by hundreds of readers since: What, other than sheer chutzpah, gives authority to any language "authority" — or, as my correspondents put it, "Who the hell are you to say?"

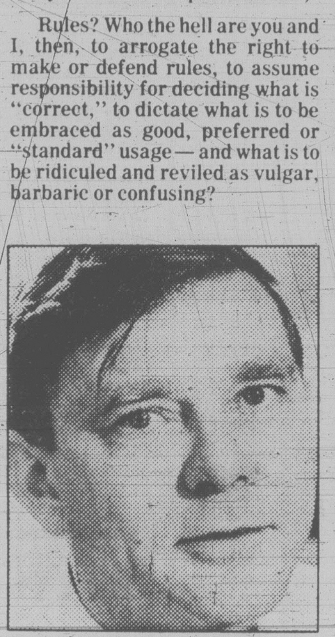
I'm a working writer, that's who. (That's whom ? No. Who is correct.) I write because I enjoy expressing myself, and writing forces me to think more coherently than I do when just shooting off my mouth. Because I both write to live and live to write, I have taken an interest in the implements of my craft. (Why implements? Why not the shorter and more understandable tools ? Because that would draw me into "tools of my trade," a cliche. But isn't it better to use a convenient cliche than to seem to labor to get away from it? Yes; I should have written "tools of my trade.")

In this essay, I have been writing like a character out of Eugene O'Neill's Strange Interlude, spouting soliloquies in parentheses to show rather than to say how a writer about language writes. Such asides, when overused, are annoying to the reader; he does not like being constantly jerked back into a previous paragraph. But the writer, and the careful speaker, is constantly catching himself and correcting himself, if he cares.

There is a big difference between being conscious of your language and being self-conscious about the way you write and speak. To be conscious of language is to be proud of the magnificent and subtle instrument in your hands; to be self-conscious about the possibility of error, or fearful of the derision of your listener at your experiments with the instrument, is to be a nerd, a schnook and a wimp.

Who are the Great Permitters? We are the people who care about clarity and precision, who detest the fuzziness of expression that reveals sloppiness or laziness of thought. Henry Fowler was one; Ted Bernstein was one; Bergen Evans was one; Jacques Barzun is one; I'm one. If you've read this far and are prepared to go further, you're one. We live the life of the mindful, and we intend each utterance to say a mouthful. We are not fuddy-duddies: If we want to carefully and deliberately split an infinitive, we do so with zest, knowing that the most fun in breaking a rule is in knowing what rule you're breaking. (That's why I can get away with all these parentheses.)

Rules? Who the hell are you and I, then, to arrogate the right to make or defend rules, to assume responsibility for deciding what is "correct," to dictate what is to be embraced as good, preferred or "standard" usage — and what is to be ridiculed and reviled as vulgar, barbaric or confusing?



BAKER . . . a mention

We are the people who care; we've registered for the linguistic primary. Our interest is our power.

Otto Jesperson, the Danish linguistic philosopher, defended his right to resist those who insisted that "usage is king." Esaias Tegner, who popularized linguistic research in Sweden, wrote in 1874 that "the greatest absurdities in the world become correct, as soon as they have got Usage fully on their side, just as the worst usurper becomes legitimate, as soon as he is completely established on his throne."

Jesperson replied in 1925: "I am not one of those who recognize the worst usurper as legitimate as soon as he is firmly established on his throne . . . There is a higher linguistic morality than that of recognizing the greatest absurdities when they once have usage on their side." Then he set forth the Code of the Great Permitters. He granted the point of lexicographers who insist that the task of investigators of language is to describe the actual language in use, and not to lay down rules for a more orderly language they wish existed. "But at the same time," Jesperson wrote, "the investigator as a user of the language has the same right as others to influence the language where he can, and he ought to be able by virtue of his greater knowledge to do this with greater insight and greater effect than those who have no linguistic training."

Now we have come to the bone of contention that has been gnawed by everyone who works in the world of words: Do we "go with the flow," as the laid-back set advises, or do we try to direct the flow? Are we to be good scientists, clinically descriptive, or are we to be activists for clarity, prescribing the usage that helps a string of words make more sense?

I choose activism. I do not "opt for" activism, because "opt" connotes decision made on impulse, and what I do in this case is to chew it over before making a choice.

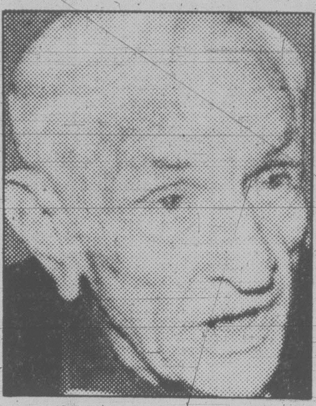
That choice of activism forces the next choice. Try an analogy: In politics, I chose conservatism. But that choice immediately forced another choice: Would I become a traditionalist, preserving the values of society, or a libertarian, crawling out on that other branch of conservatism which rejects the force of organized society in determining individual moral decisions? For example, should prostitution, which is immoral, be legalized? Traditional conservatives, defending society's values, say no; libertarian conservatives say yes — it is the responsibility of the individual, not the government, to make moral decisions. I'm a libertarian conservative: Let thinking people decide for themselves.

In the same way, the linguistic activist — who is willing to struggle to conserve the clarity and color in the language — has to decide whether to be traditionalist or libertarian. (See? The whether is fine.) The traditional activist derides and often sensibly resists change in the language — why use "rip-off" when "theft" will do? Why concoct "contact" as a verb instead of "get in touch with"? The libertarian activist counters that "rip-off" graphically describes an act of theft, and by virtue of vividness as well as widespread acceptance deserves its place in the dictionary; "contact" may be a verb overused by businessmen, but has the same etymological root as "get in touch with" and is shorter.

A libertarian language activist is not one of those relax-and-enjoy-it, purely descriptive types. He wants to cheer on "parameter," borrowed from mathematics and now used to mean "scope," or "limits"; at the same time, he wants to hoot at such nonce expressions as "What am I looking at?" — now used to mean "What are the consequences?" or "How deeply am I likely to become involved?" Similarly, he will welcome "full court press" from basketball lingo to replace the tiring "all-out effort," but will ridicule the vogue verb "to defence against" from football, preferring the more direct "to defend." It's a matter of taste.

English is a stretch language; one size fits all. That does not mean anything goes; in most instances, anything does not go. But the language, as it changes, conforms itself to special groups and occasions: There is a time for dialect, a place for slang, an occasion for literary form. What is correct on the sports page is out of place on the Op-Ed page; what is with it on the street may well be without it in the classroom. The spoken language does not have the same standards as the written language — the tune you whistle is not the orchestra's score. Even profanity's acceptance changes: In the '30s, Clark Gable's line in Gone With the Wind — "Frankly, Scarlett, I don't give a damn" — was passed by the Hays Office, provided the actor placed the emphasis on "give" rather than "damn." Today, traditionalists would be happy to settle for an emphatic "damn" rather than an earthier expletive.

The Great Permitters — both the demanding traditionalists and the selective libertarians — want to give this change a shove in the direction of freshness and precision. When we see "the embattled Secretary of Defence" in print, and we know the writer meant the significantly different "besieged," we feel beleaguered ("besieged by encirclement"). Adjective salad is delicious, with each element contributing its individual flavor; but a pur-ee of adjective soup tastes yechy.



STENGEL . . . 'look it up'

This urge to fight the good fight — "good" in the sense of "righteous," as in "the Good Book" — explains the resurgence of interest in usage. Let's not go overboard — those who care about language are book buyers and letter writers, and the noise of our outcry makes us appear more numerous than we are — but the popularity of language books and dictionaries, and the torrent of mail that pours in whenever I misuse "who" for "whom," suggests a growing lust for standards in speech and writing.

My "Shame on You!" file is bulging, despite the establishment of a separate file under "Y" for letters that begin "You, of all people . . ." The correct spelling of the town called "Chumley" is "Cholmondeley." Protests about puns are ignored (let a simile be your umbrella) but nit-picking about tired or mixed metaphors is respected and acted upon. I once wrote a speech for Everett Dirksen hailing "a firm hand on the rudder of the Ship of State," and a letter writer set me straight with "If that's true, somebody is drowning and nobody has a hand on the tiller."

These letters of constructive criticism and warmly apoplectic chastisement make up the best part of this column. The constituency of English lovers is also responsive to queries, as columns on "mondegreens," shibboleths and "fumblerules" have illustrated. The Lexicographic Irregulars who have taken it upon themselves to set me straight or help me out (I should do a piece on the proliferation of "out" — in teen-age argot, "out" is "in") make clear that the language activists have never been more active.

Some of the interest in the world of words comes from people who like to put less-educated people down — Language Snobs, who give good usage a bad name. Others enjoy letting off steam in a form of mock anger, treating their peeves as pets. But most of the interest, I think, comes from a search for standards and values. We resent fogginess; we resist manipulation by spokesmen who use loaded words and catch phrases; we wonder if, in language, we can find a few of the old moorings. We are not groping for the bygone, we are reaching for a firm foothold in fundamentals. And we are pushing for the personally possible: Since we cannot get our hands on macroeconomics and defeat inflation, or single-handedly sweep back the Soviet tide, we seek some other area where personal action has effect — we can stand fast against the tide of solecisms that enshrines ignorance and we fight the inflation of modifiers that demeans meaning.

The old moorings are in the process of moving out to sea, as they have always been in the English language, but a decent respect for the usage ukases of the Great Permitters offers this generation some sense of orderliness in discourse. To paraphrase Emerson on being well dressed, the knowledge of speaking correctly gives the speaker a feeling of inner tranquillity that religion is powerless to bestow.

The sense of powerlessness that has been bothering so many intellectuals — anomie-tooism — should stop at the edge of language. There, in classroom and home, some personal muscle can be flexed: "Different from" is preferable to "different than"; "from" separates more strongly than "than." Oldsters may find it hard to discuss the old spine of self-reliance, or to adapt to the tieless-in-Gaza dress codes, or to hear children call their teachers by their first names, but when it comes to the basic tool of human communication, some guidance bottomed on the unchanging values of clarity and grace can be provided. A start can be made by denouncing mushy meanings and high living in syntax.

People who care about good writing, whether readers or writers, have the power to set the criteria for good usage higher than that level acquiesced in by the norma loquendi. The common denominator — another term for "usage" — need not be a standard to which those hooked on elegance or grace, or zonked out on vividness or precision, can repair. Common usage excuses; good usage demands.

French challenged to fight alcoholism

By PAUL WEBSTER

PARIS — President Giscard d'Estaing is being challenged to wreck his country's most profitable industry — drink. The challenge comes in a report which depicts France as a nation sinking into a great alcoholic stupor.

The three-year study, led by a cancer expert, Professor Jean Bernard, would be important simply as a catalogue of repercussions in the most drunken country in the West, where 40,000 people are killed by drink each year.

It also recommends a 10-year anti-alcohol program with enormous social and economic implications.

Bernard has no illusions about the impact of his report. "Alcoholism is the public health domain where the most important single national interest is opposed by the greatest number of personal interests," he says.

The result of the intertwined interests of French wine-growers, spirit and beer producers is what Giscard himself has called "the most important of social plagues." With an average consumption of 24 litres of pure alcohol a year, the French drink 25 per cent more than West Germans and more than double the amount of British and Americans.

More than 4,500,000 French people — nearly one in 10 of the population — are permanently dependent on drink. Two million are officially registered as chronic addicts. Nearly half of work accidents and more than 40 per cent of road accidents are directly attributable to drinking.

Robert Papon, the economy minister, estimates that alcoholism costs the nation more than $15 billion a year, much of it in industry, where the effect of strikes on production is minimal in comparison. In return the government receives less than $2 billion in alcohol tax.

However, with a tenth of the population directly or indirectly dependent on alcohol sales for a living, the most powerful industrial lobby in France has already developed a massive campaign to wreck the Bernard report.

Although wine sales have fallen in value by 40 per cent, wine still accounts for 70 per cent of French spending on alcohol. Once-despised popular wines have become chic through clever advertising, and wine snobbery has made middle-class dependency respectable.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was down sharply in moderately active mid-afternoon trading today.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said subdivided common shares of Comaplex Resources International Ltd. will be posted for trading at the opening Aug. 7, replacing currently listed shares. Shareholders approved a two-for-one stock split June 2.

Trading resumed at 2 p.m. in shares of Brinco Ltd. after a two-session halt and the stock fell 1¼ to $8½.

Trading also resumed at 2 p.m. in shares of Cassiar Asbestos Corp. Ltd. following a trading halt Friday and the stock gained ½ to $13¾.

Vancouver

Prices were up in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 11 a.m. PDT was 4,324,338 shares.

Of the stocks that traded, 170 advanced, 126 declined and 186 remained steady.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led the industrials and gained a .05 to $6.55 on 37,825 shares. Renn Industries dropped .10 to $1.90 on 2,900 shares, Canadian Javelin Ltd. declined .05 to $1.45 on 2,197 shares and Hal Roach Studio dropped .05 to $4.25 on 1,700 shares. Proflex Ltd. was down .03 to .20 and MacMillan Bloedel was steady at $32½.

Arcadia Explorations Ltd. led resource and development board traders and gained .05 to .72 on 507,500 shares. Nuspar Resources rose .08 to .92 on 148,900 shares; Jubilee Explorations advanced .08 to .99 on 126,666 shares and Copper Lake Explorations dropped .70 to $3.20 on 109,500 shares. Eurocan Ventures L gained a quarter to $4 and Groundstar Resources Ltd. rose .47 to $3.45.

Blue Diamond Energy led traders on the curb exchange and remained steady at $1.30 on 365,400 shares, Bonneville Development Ltd. rose .03 to .57 on 224,000 shares, Mackenzie Energy dropped .01 to $1.10 on 125,900 shares and Cal Dynamics warrants was steady at .53 on 91,500 shares. Jewel Resources advanced a nickel to $1.30 and Pilgrim Petroleum dropped a nickel to $3.15.

New York

The stock market turned upward today, bidding to break out of the neutral trend of the past several sessions.

Since last Wednesday, when the Dow reached a three-year high of 936.18, stock prices have retreated. Analysts said this was to be expected after an almost uninterrupted rally since April.

Adding to the cautious atmosphere has been a recent upswing in interest rates. On Monday New York's Chemical Bank raised its prime lending rate from 10¾ to 11 per cent.

But after a round of selling early Monday, prices recovered most of their losses. And by mid-day the market was pushing higher again.

Koehring jumped 12¼ to $36. On Monday a subsidiary of Dominion Bridge Co. of Montreal announced plans to acquire Koehring through a $37-a-share tender offer.

Other point-plus gainers on the active list included Tandy, up 5 to $68⅛ and Black and Decker 1⅛ to $21¼.

London

The London stock market was mixed near the close of trading today.

The Financial Times index was down 1.3 to 482.1.

Industrials were mixed. Canadian stocks eased.

Demand for wood to outstrip supply?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bright, long-term prospects for exports of some wood products may surpass British Columbia's ability to meet that potential demand, a senior forest-industry executive warns.

Demand for softwood plywood should increase substantially in several areas of the world but "we don't have unlimited volumes to export," vice-president Bryce Page of Weldwood of Canada Ltd. said in a recent interview.

Page said available supplies can be increased somewhat as the company's waferboard production grows east of the Rockies and displaces some domestic plywood demand.

Weldwood planned to expand its recently-acquired waferboard plant at Slave Lake, Alta., to match the 115-million-square-foot production capacity of its plant at Longlac, Ont.

General industry efforts to increase efficiency would also help, but there would remain the basic problem of economically-exploitable areas all being allocated.

Meanwhile, Page said, costs for new plants were mounting with inflation.

Weldwood was "currently looking at some modest expansion" at Quesnel, B.C., where it and Japanese partners own a bleached kraft pulp mill. As an example of the effects of inflation, Page said the mill, completed in 1972 for $85 million, would cost $350 million to build today.

New timber areas in northern B.C. have smaller, less valuable trees and lack road, rail and community facilities.

"The economics are going to have to change significantly before we can go in there," Page said.

Weldwood, whose six mills account for one quarter of Canada's softwood plywood production, said in its last annual report that declining North American markets and falling prices forced it to adopt temporary closures at its plywood plant at Vancouver.

The company hopes to stabilize production and employment by increased exports to places like Japan, where ambitious attempts to change the housing habits of centuries are beginning to pay off for the B.C. wood products industry.

To the Japanese, North America's platform-frame building style offers more rapid housebuilding, better insulation and less use of wood compared with the country's traditional beam-and-post construction methods.

Of about 850,000 houses built in Japan over the last several years, he said, only 15,000 have been built with platform-frame methods, using wood in dimensions produced by North American mills.

With increasing Japanese acceptance of such Canadian products as the two-by-four-inch board has come a trend toward the standard four-by-eight-foot sheet of plywood.

By this time next year, Page said, Weldwood's sales to Japan could be double or triple their present volume.

He said the company doesn't expect the plywood to have an immediate, dramatic impact on the balance sheet, which for 1979 showed net sales of $528 million for all products.

Weldwood currently exports only about 20 per cent of its $145 million softwood plywood productions and less than one tenth of those exports go to Japan. The rest goes to Europe.

No matter how good long-term prospects are, forest industry firms have to be prepared to weather troublesome periods in their unstable business, Page said.

Bullish market defies the odds

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — It's more than four months now since the stock market began what might be called the rally that nobody believed.

From its low point of about 729 in the late afternoon of March 27 — the climax of the silver crisis involving the Hunt brothers of Dallas — the Dow Jones industrial average of 30 industrials climbed 200 points by late July.

That put the Dow at its best level in three years. Four other leading market indexes, meanwhile, reached record highs.

All the way up, the advance was greeted with doubt and suspicion. The market was "overbought," and due for a "correction," many chart-watching technicians contended.

And a lot of the fundamental analysts, for their part, maintained the advance would wither once the effects of a steep recession began to show up in corporate earnings reports.

But to date, it hasn't worked out that way. In fact, the advance has proceeded virtually without interruption, even as the economy was slipping into the depths of the recession.

"All this has happened amid a tremendous amount of skepticism," said Hugh Johnson at the firm of First Albany Corp.

Not all investing institutions missed the boat, Johnson noted. "But many of them never recognized a bull market when it was staring them right in the face."

In his investment advisory letter The Professional Tape Reader, Stan Weinstein noted the rally has been a textbook case for followers of the time-honored "Contrary Opinion" school of market thinking, which holds basically that stock prices will do whatever is necessary to prove most people wrong.

At a recent investment seminar at which he spoke, Weinstein said, "Everything I saw and heard made me feel more bullish.

"Being a longtime contrarian, it warmed my heart to hear so much gloom and doom crammed into four days. There is still plenty of worry about a coming depression, potential bank failures and the need of investors to continue to avoid the stock market.

"All of these fit in nicely with our bull market thesis, which we have been stressing, where the market climbs a wall of worry."

In Johnson's view, many of the buyers who have pushed prices up by 25 per cent or more since early spring have been acting on the newfound belief that some important "fundamental changes in attitude" are taking place.

For instance, he said, concern about the country's productivity problems may have reached the point of prompting changes in the tax laws that could work strongly in the market's favor in the 1980s.

One hitch in all this for contrary thinkers — there are signs the consensus view has grown less skeptical lately. Consider the statistics tabulated by Investors Intelligence Inc. of Larchmont, N.Y., which tracks the prevailing mood of about 95 investment advisory services.

In May and June, more than 40 per cent fell into the "bearish" category, a fact which was considered quite favorable for the market outlook. As Investors Intelligence explains it: "Since most advisory services are trend followers, they are most bearish at market bottoms and least bearish at market tops."

Lately, however, the percentage of bears has fallen to less than 30. Thus, it would seem, if the stock market is going to continue its rally, it will have to do so without so much of the skepticism and gloom on which it apparently thrives.

Pan Am selling N.Y. site

NEW YORK (AP) — Pan American World Airways, which reported record losses in the first two quarters of 1980, is selling its towering share of the Manhattan skyline for about $400 million.

The 59-storey building topped by the blue Pan Am logo will be bought by Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., which is putting up $350 million in cash in what Pan Am terms "the largest real-estate financial transaction for a single building in history."

The insurance company, which said the building name would not change, also will take over a $50-million, low-interest mortgage from Pan Am, which will continue to make the building its headquarters.

Pan Am had a first-quarter deficit of $74.9 million and a second-quarter loss of $66.3 million.

"I would say we're a troubled company," said William Seawell, chairman and chief executive officer. "I would say we're a troubled industry; 1980 is trouble for the airline industry."

Pan Am said its losses reflect fuel costs that jumped 81 per cent in the quarter ending June 30, its inability to raise fares on international routes and a softening market.

It has not yet been determined how Pan Am will use the proceeds from the sale which will be final about Jan. 1

Sable Island word awaited

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — Mobil Oil Canada Ltd. should know by next March whether there are commercially-exploitable reserves of natural gas at Sable Island, Steve Romansky, the company's east coast operations manager said Friday.

Mobil is preparing the jack-up drilling rig Rowan Juneau to drill a 6,000-metre well — the deepest yet on the east coast — at its Venture find near Sable. The step-out well this summer will be drilled one nautical mile east of the Venture D-23 well which has shown promising results.

Venture D-23, 12 nautical miles east of Sable, flowed gas at a restricted rate of 11.6 million cubic feet a day in tests last year.

Estimates are that two trillion feet of natural gas lie below the curving spit of sand off Nova Scotia. Three trillion cubic feet are considered necessary to make the find commercially viable.

Romansky told reporters that Mobil has spent $140 million on East Coast exploration without pumping a drop of saleable product. The total program off the east coast, involving several companies, has cost $350 million so far.

The $35 million Sable program this summer is 75 per cent financed by Petro-Canada, the state-owned oil company, and 25 per cent by Kaiser Resources, a private concern. Mobil is program operator.

Atco prepares new proposal

CALGARY (CP) — Atco Ltd. is not yet ready to mail its new offer to shareholders of Calgary Power Ltd., Atco said in a news release Friday.

The company withdrew its previous offer last week after it was challenged on various legal fronts by Calgary Power management. Terms of the new offer are expected to be the same as the previous offer — $21 a share.

Atco applied Friday to the Alberta Securities Commission for the right to withdraw its new offer if it develops that approval of a regulatory body is required but not obtained or if legal prohibitions prevent the company taking up the shares.

The application was opposed by Calgary Power at a hearing in Edmonton on Friday, but the Alberta Securities Commission granted the order on the basis applied for by Atco.

Atco said in the news release that it expects to make similar applications of Manitoba, Quebec, and Ontario in the next few days.

Coneco expanding

EDMONTON (CP) — Coneco Equipment Ltd. is in the midst of a $3.3 million expansion of its operations in Alberta and British Columbia.

The Edmonton-based construction and resource equipment supplier said it will spend about $1.4 million each for new buildings in Fort McMurray and Fort St. John, B.C., and has moved into a new $500,000 building in Red Deer.

Subsidized store forces him to close

FORT WARE (CP) — A goverment subsidy is helping Sekani Indians run their own store in this isolated B.C. village and has forced the operator of a local trading post out of business.

Jim Van Somer, 66, says he was stunned but not bitter about the development, which forced him to close the trading post he had operated for 10 years at this Indian village of 220 people 400 kilometres north of Prince George.

Van Somer, who has lived in the northern B.C. district for 45 years and worked as a trapper, freighter and trader, learned last month that he had two months to sell his stock and close shop when the Indian band refused to renew his annual retail permit.

Meanwhile, the Indians, with the help of a $60,000 federal grant, have converted the band hall into a store.

Lloyd Mackenzie, spokesman for the Indian affairs ministry, said the Indians complained that Van Somer wasn't stocking enough supplies and his shelves were often empty.

He also said the department didn't feel any obligation to the original trading post operator.

The major difference between the two stores is that Van Somer rarely has less than $25,000 on credit, while there is no credit at the Indian store.

Van Somer said the Indians also complained about his prices, "but in their store their prices are higher than mine."

Agreement erases 190 Panco layoffs

SURREY (CP) — Panco Poultry Ltd. has reached a tentative labor settlement with its employees that will rescind last Wednesday's layoff of 190 workers.

Company manager L.W. Van Camp said the agreement, which must be ratified by members of the United Food and Commercial Workers' Union, is a two-year settlement. He refused to release details although there are reports the agreement calls for a 13- to 14-per-cent rise in wages and fringe benefits.

The layoffs of most of the firm's 330 workers came with the company citing low productivity as the cause.

$2.1M pot haul

RICHMOND (CP) — Two Vancouver people were charged Saturday following the seizure of more than $2.1 million worth of heroin at Vancouver International Airport.

Police said Wendy Louise Sommerville, 26, and Philip Andre Hanko, 21, were charged with unlawfully importing a narcotic and possession of the drug for the purpose of trafficking.

Police said the seizure of more than 250 grams of heroin was made after a man and a woman arrived at the airport on a flight from India via Tokyo.

Sales curbs urged

KELOWNA (CP) — The British Columbia Tree Fruit Board will seek to limit sales by independent producers at the next convention of the B.C. Fruit Growers' Association, says the chairman of the marketing board.

Christine Dendy said the board will propose to the meeting of the 2,000-member association that sales by independents be limited solely to production of individual orchards.

Independent sellers, while accounting for a small portion of total sales, have been taking an increasing share of the $110 million industry. Last year, the industry lost $1 million in apple sales to independents who sold largely to large firms such as Kelly-Douglas Ltd.

Catches plummet

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fishermen in Canadian waters have been catching fewer than one-tenth as many Fraser River sockeye salmon this year as in 1976, the International Pacific Salmon Commission says.

The joint Canadian-American commission estimates this year's catch of sockeye to Aug. 1 at 32,000 fish. The corresponding figure for 1976, which the commission says in a news release was otherwise a comparable year, was 354,000.

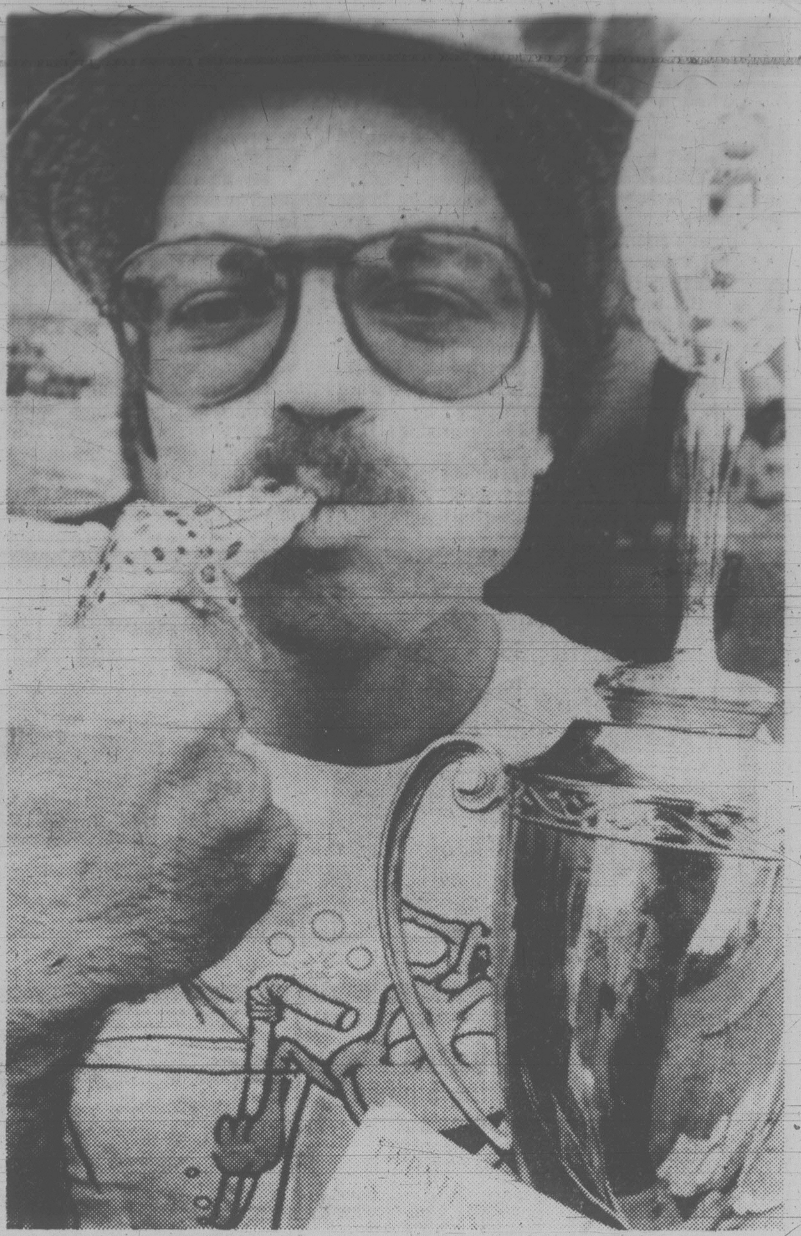
$3.7M loan to turkey processors

OTTAWA (UPC) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan announced today the federal government will provide up to $3.75 million in financing assistance to two British Columbia poultry processors to keep those firms in Canadian hands.

The Treasury Board approved repayable financing for Lilydale Cooperative Ltd. to purchase Maplewood Poultry Processors of Clearbrook, and J.J. Hambley Hatchery (B.C.) Ltd. of Abbotsford.

Whelan said the action was taken to prevent a major U.S. company from buying the two enterprises.



PreFontaine thanks his prize-winning yearling frog with kiss

Frogs hop to it for cash

ST. PIERRE-JOLYS, Man. (CP) — A yearling frog owned by Gerry Prefontaine has won the frog jumping competition at the 11th annual Frog Follies watched by a crowd of 7,000.

For Prefontaine, a resident of St. Pierre-Jolys, it marked the fourth year in a row that his entries have won the competition.

His frog, J. C., jumped 401 centimetres on three successive leaps to hop off with $250 first prize money in the adult sweepstakes division of the weekend tournament.

Another local resident, Richard Couch, 16, had his frog win the longest-jumping division for the second straight year. His frog, Sam, won with a 464-centimetre jump, six centimetres more than last year's record.

His brother Robert, 12, had the winning entry in the frog jumping event for 12-year-olds.

A record 260 frogs took part in the event for $2,500 in prizes.

Native protest leader disappointed in Munro

STAND OFF, Alta. (CP) — Dennis First Rider, the 32-year-old Blood Indian who organized a blockade to get John Munro's attention, now isn't happy with the Indian affairs minister's response.

First Rider pronounced himself disappointed with the results of a meeting of his group of Blood activists, Munro and the Blood band council to discuss land claims disputes and treaty rights as well as treatment of protesters by RCMP at Cardston, Alta., about 80 kilometres southwest of Lethbridge, a week ago.

After a four-hour meeting with Munro and other department officials, the council announced a joint committee of Indian affairs officials and band members which would investigate the land claims, which cover about 275 square kilometres adjacent to the reserve, including Cardston itself, a southern Alberta town of 3,200.

Leroy Little Bear, legal consultant for the 5,500-member band, said the claims covering loss of use alone amount to $60 million.

The committee will review the 172 land transactions involved in the claims, council member Les Healey told a meeting of band members and reporters. At the same time the band will suspend legal action aimed at forcing the land claims issue in the courts.

Clark fears blow-up over 'prejudice' to West

By DAN TURNER
FP News Service

CALGARY — Opposition Leader Joe Clark says the Trudeau government's treatment of the West may amount to "prejudice," adding that he has never seen a period in Canadian political history with more potential for things "to blow sky-high."

Clark's assessment of the Liberal government's real attitude toward the West came during a weekend airplane interview with FP News Service, and appears to be bolstered by a statement Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau apparently made during a private meeting with Clark last June 4.

During that meeting, a top Clark aide has told FP, Clark expressed fears to Trudeau that Ottawa's hard-line approach to negotiations with Alberta and Saskatchewan over oil pricing and the constitution might lead to increased western alienation.

Trudeau's reply, said the source, was:

"I came into politics to keep Quebec in Confederation. Somebody else will have to save the West."

Clark refused to confirm the quote.

When he was asked whether he had any information, either from conversations with Trudeau or anywhere else, that the prime minister did not have any interest in dealing with western disaffection, Clark replied: "We've only had one private conversation of any length — before the first ministers' conference, and it was private, and I don't want to comment on it."

At the same time, the substance of the alleged Trudeau quote was mentioned twice during the Clark interview, and when the Opposition leader was later advised that FP had access to the exchange from the private talk, Clark said: "I thought so."

A senior Clark official was more to the point. Told that FP was aware of Trudeau's comment, he asked that it not be used on grounds that the talk between the two leaders was private.

But there it is, and it may help explain why Clark, in the interview following a three-day tour of Manitoba and Alberta, homed in on what he described as Liberal "ignorance amounting to prejudice" toward the West.

Clark said he finds it is surprising — and "dangerous to the country" — that "the significance of (the government's) indifference to attitudes in this region . . . the fact that there could be an ignorance amounting to prejudice . . . is rarely commented upon."

He maintained that "for a long, long time" prominent Conservatives were unable to speak about Quebec without whatever they said being "looked at from several different angles to see if it masked some fundamental prejudice."

Yet when the underlying Liberal attitude toward the West is examined: " . . . I think that what they are doing now could be very seriously hurting the country.

"It's the sort of thing that if Dief had done it regarding Quebec there would have been all sorts of editorial reaction and criticism in the country, and there seems to be very little of that now."

In discussing the issue, Clark gave Trudeau credit for fulfilling at least part of the Liberal leader's "personal agenda" for improving the status of Quebecers in Confederation. He implemented the Official Languages Act and had made Ottawa a comfortable place for French-Canadians to work.

But if that "personal agenda" was all the prime minister was interested in, said Clark, he was "fundamentally irresponsible."

"What you have to do, if you are a prime minister trying to be successful, is keep your own agenda alive while serving the nation's agenda — but the nation's agenda must prevail.

"I hope we're not entering an era in which Trudeau tries to unite the rest of the country against the West of the country. But there is no evidence that he has a broader goal in mind, and that alarms me."

Ottawa to sell 1M ounces of gold

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will sell up to one million more ounces of gold from its official reserves, Finance Minister Allan MacEachen said today.

The new sales program repeats one announced last December by the previous Progressive Conservative government which decided to sell up to one million ounces of the precious metal to reduce its proportion in the make-up of Canada's official reserves.

In addition to gold, the reserves — used to defend the value of the Canadian dollar — consist of U.S. dollars, other foreign currencies and special drawing rights, a paper currency developed by the International Monetary Fund.

As of July 31, there are 21.3 million ounces of gold in the reserves, down from 22 million ounces last December and close to the Conservative government's sales target.

Holdings of gold would drop to 20 million ounces once both the Conservative and Liberal sales targets are met.

MacEachen's announcement was made in a monthly statement which showed that Canada's holdings of foreign currency reserves declined by $288.2 million U.S. at the end of July as the Bank of Canada intervened to ease a more than one-half cent drop in the dollar last month.

The dollar was 85.79 cents U.S. at the end of July.

Figures released today showed official international reserves at $4.01 billion U.S. at the end of July, down from $4.3 billion at the end of June.

The monthly report, expressed in U.S. dollars because they are the principal currency used in foreign exchange markets, showed that a decline of $247.8 million in holdings of U.S. dollars accounted for most of the drop in reserves during the month.

U.S. currency, the largest component in the reserves, dropped to $1.8 billion at the end of July.

After U.S. dollars, gold has the largest value in the reserves and at the end of last month had a book value of $978 million U.S. or $1.12 billion Canadian.

In keeping with its policy of selling gold from the reserves, the government sold 12,600 ounces at an average price of $642.8 U.S. an ounce or $9.5 million Canadian.

Wreck found

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Searchers have found the wreckage of a small aircraft carrying three persons that was missing on a flight from Renton, Wash.

RCMP at Prince George said Sunday badly-wrecked remains of the plane were found at Tabor Mountain, about 24 kilometres east of the city.

Honey Recipe of the Month
August: SUNDAY PECAN ROLLS
Speedy Breakfast Treat

Bee Maid Honey

1/2 cup Bee Maid Honey
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/3 cup coarsely chopped pecans
1 package (12) brown-and-serve dinner rolls

Select a baking pan (8- or 9-inch cake or pie pan), providing a "snug" fit for the rolls. Pour honey into pan. Add 4 tablespoons of the butter and the cinnamon. Heat in oven until butter melts. Blend ingredients. Sprinkle with pecans. Arrange rolls, tops up in honey mixture. Spread roll tops with reserved butter. Bake at 400° F. for 10-12 minutes, or until rolls are browned. Cool 5-10 minutes before inverting pan over serving plate.

Individual Sunday Pecan Rolls may be baked in muffin pans. Spoon honey mixture into bottoms of 12 muffin cups. Place a roll in each cup. Butter tops and bake as directed above.

Lawyer trims T-D bank on $8.61 overcharge

NELSON (CP) — A local lawyer who took the Toronto-Dominion Bank to court because of an $8.61 interest overcharge has won what he says is a precedent-setting case that may effect many credit card holders across Canada.

In an Aug. 1 decision, Provincial Court Judge L. J. Keffer found the bank guilty of misinterpreting its own credit card contract by repeatedly overcharging interest on bill payments.

Nils Jensen, the lawyer who sued the bank, said although he had paid his Chargex bill promptly each month the bank did not credit his account until up to two weeks after each payment.

From March, the bank had accumulated $8.61 interim interest charges on Jensen's account.

"I sued on a point of principle — that they were in breach of their contract," said Jensen, who got back his $8.61 plus one per cent interest.

"I hope the T-D, through its computer system, will attempt to find all the people they have improperly charged interest and reimburse them. It think that's only fair."

Jensen said if the bank continues to improperly charge interest, it may in future be liable under the provincial Debt Collection Act. The act would make the bank liable to a minimum of $100 damages each time it collects excess interest.

Bank officials were unavailable for comment.

Carter fighting back

as a U.S. agent or lobbyist for Libya July 14 under legal pressure — Billy said: "I owe them $220,000, but feel no obligation otherwise."

President Carter, 55, said of his 43-year-old brother that "We are personally close — I love him and he loves me."

At the same time, the older brother took pains to dissociate himself from Billy's activities, describing him as a colorful personality who is "extremely independent."

First political reactions were cautious.

Republican Robert Dole of Kansas, taking part in a Senate investigation into the Billy affair that opened a few hours before the president's statement, said Carter did "a good job." But Dole added that the investigators "still have a lot to explore."

New York City Mayor Edward Koch, a Democrat who has suggested the party convention should consider candidates other than Carter, remarked that "it's unfair to visit the sins of the brother upon the president."

A spokesman for Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, a prime rival, said Democrats other than Kennedy supporters oppose Carter's presidential candidacy.

Jimmy Carter's 13,000-word report to the Senate investigators and his news conference came three weeks after Billy registered under federal law as an agent for Libya, disclosing the money payments and a deal with an American oil company whereby he stood to make millions of dollars if Libya had increased oil shipments to the firm.

The president suggested investigation of the case should continue.

Diseased dogs killed

SEATTLE (AP) — Thirty-one dogs, mostly puppies, were destroyed at an animal shelter here after a contracting the highly contagious disease, parvovirus, an animal-control official said.

The disease, new to Seattle, forced the city to close the shelter over the weekend when the animals were killed, said Mike Burgwyn, manager of the city's animal-control division.

Dan Rather denies killings

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet media says, and Dan Rather emphatically denies, that the CBS News correspondent took part in the killing of three workers while he was filming Moslem rebels in Afghanistan.

The Soviet news agency Tass on Monday quoted the Afghan newspaper Hagigate Enqelabe Sowr as saying two members of a rebel gang who recently surrendered to government authorities recounted that toward the end of March U.S. reporters making a film joined the gang.

It said the gang seized three workers in the village of Fatehabad in southern Afghanistan, and "one of the U.S. newsmen took charge, ordering the bandits first to stone the captives and then to cut off their heads."

"The whole of the bloody sequence was photographed and filmed by the Americans."

Station bombing-jet crash link probed by authorities

BOLOGNA (AP) — Authorities are investigating a possible link between last weekend's bloody railway station bombing and the mysterious crash of a jetliner off the Italian coast five weeks ago, a Milan newspaper reported today.

And millions of Italians stopped work and tens of thousands poured into city squares Monday in a display of national outrage over the "Bologna massacre," the killing of 76 people.

Anti-terrorist police, suspecting the bombers were neo-Fascists, launched a country-wide sweep and reported taking an unspecified number of rightists into custody for questioning. They searched the homes of neo-Fascist sympathizers in 20 cities, looking for clues to Saturday's explosion.

Investigators have theorized that the crash of the Italian DC-9 in the Tyrrhenian Sea on June 27 may have been caused by an explosion. All 81 people aboard died in the crash.

At the time, an anonymous caller to a newspaper claimed a right-wing extremist had carried a bomb aboard the plane, a claim authorities doubted.

But the Milan newspaper Il Giorno said aviation authorities have now contacted investigators in the Bologna case to compare notes and check any possible connection.

Bologna Police Chief Italo Ferrante told a news conference that investigators have questioned 200 people throughout Italy in the case but have found no promising leads. He said several witnesses said they saw two men drop off a bag in the depot's waiting-room a few minutes before the explosion.

The explosion occurred in the waiting room and demolished that wing of the station.

Police bomb experts said the blast was caused by a 55-pound mixture of dynamite and plastic and chemical explosives.

Meanwhile, Bologna is preparing for Wednesday's mass funeral for the bombing victims. Italian President Sandro Pertini and Premier Francesco Cossiga will attend the ceremonies, their offices said.

All stores, restaurants and other small businesses in Bologna will close during the funeral, the Commercial Confederation announced. Unions in the Emilia-Romagna region around Bologna called a four-hour general strike during the services.

The national labor federation called a two-hour general strike in protest of Saturday's explosion, and union officials reported almost 100 per cent of Italian workers heeded the call.

More than 40,000 people, many waving red Communist flags, jammed the main square of this old, Communist-governed city in a protest rally.

Five thousand others marched in Venice. And workers assembled for giant evening rallies at the Colosseum in Rome and in Milan.

The strike was observed by all sectors of Italian business and industry from small shopkeepers in rural Sicily to factory workers in the highly industrialized north.

The Italian Communist Party, which has repeatedly attacked the government of Prime Minister Francesco Cossiga for not being able to stop the terrorism that has plagued Italy for the last decade, opened up on Cossiga again Monday.

Callers in Milan and Turin said the neo-Fascist Armed Revolutionary Nuclei was responsible, as did an anonymous caller soon after the blast Saturday. But several callers claiming to represent the terrorist group have denied responsibility for the Bologna blast.

Swim, pedal, run!

Lower Island athletes held off the Mainlanders and the Americans to win the men's and women's titles when Canada's first triathlon was staged Sunday at Elk Lake.

Eddie Smyth of Colwood was the first man home and Dawn Wilson of Victoria was the women's winner of the gruelling swim-pedal-run contest that drew 59 entrants from B.C., Washington and Oregon.

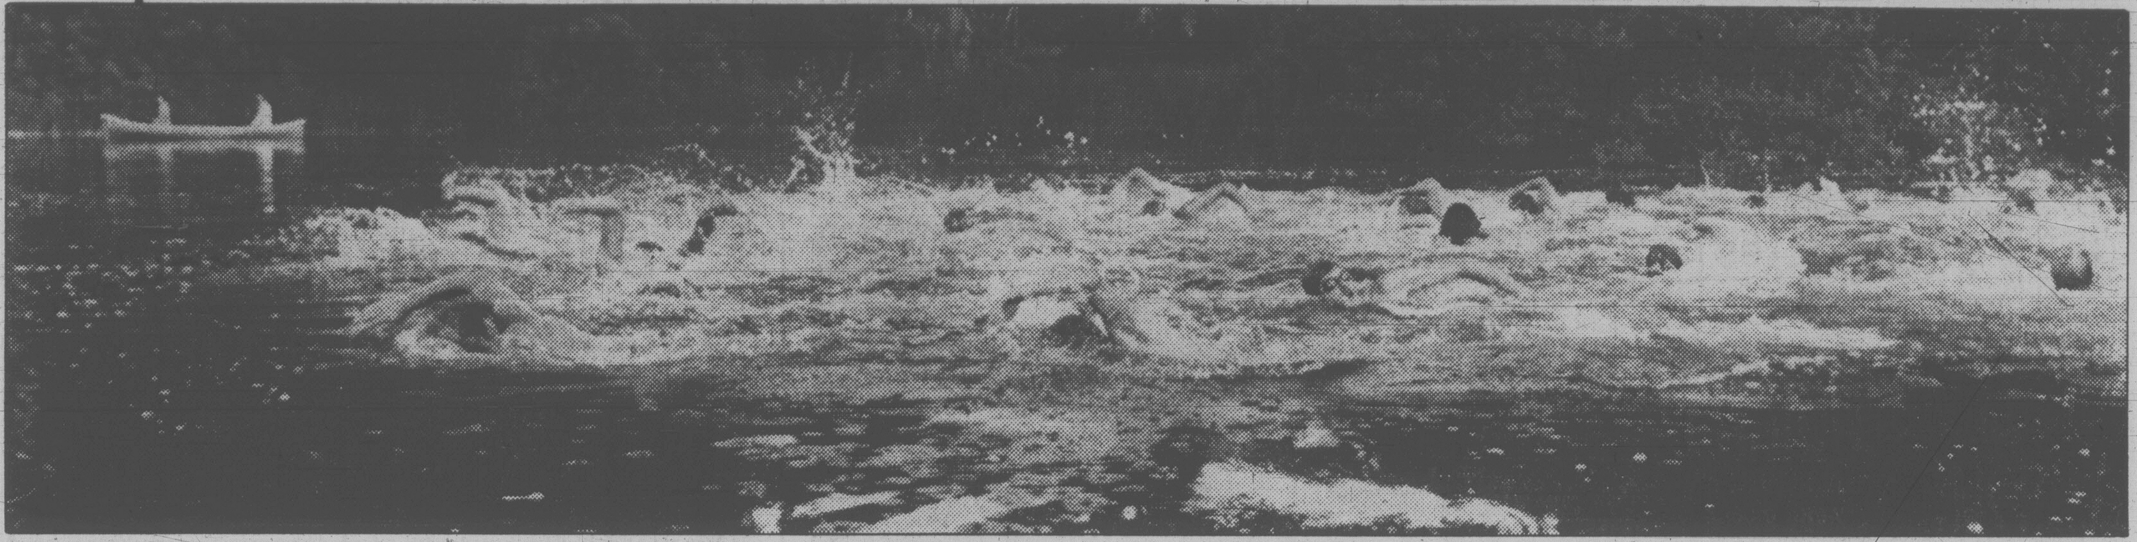
Organized by the Sri Chinmoy meditation centre's running club and patterned after similar events held in Connecticut and Hawaii, the triathlon involved a one-mile swim (the start below) in Elk Lake, a 20-mile cycle race and finally a six-mile run.

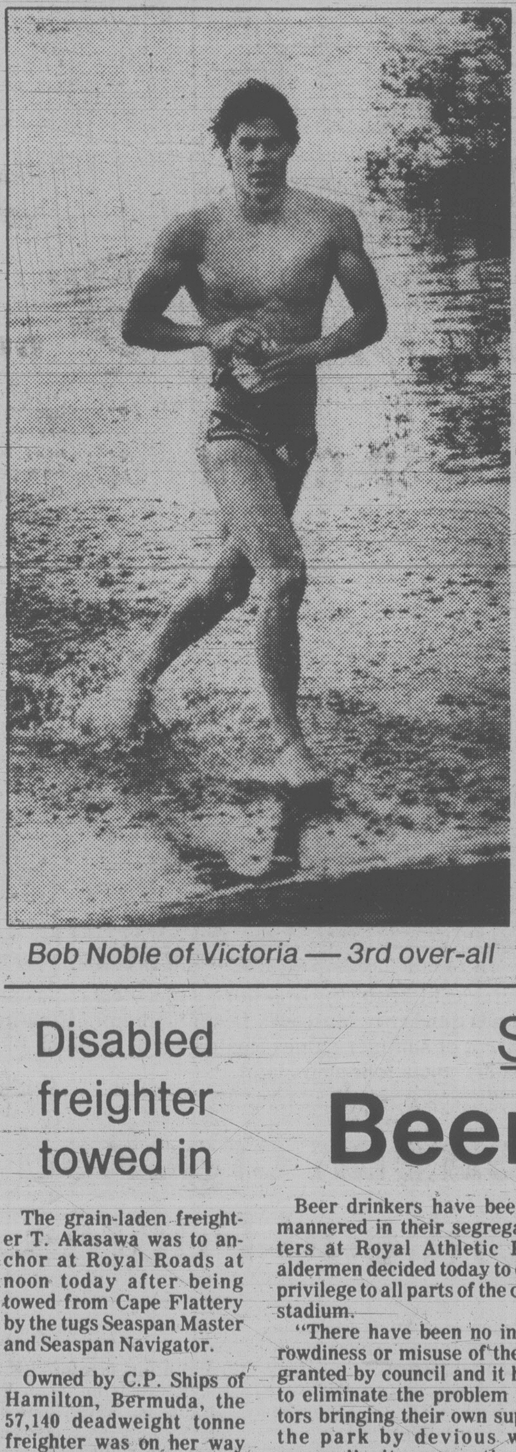
Smyth completed all three legs in just over two hours to finish ahead of Hugh Wilson of Vancouver, who was second, and Victoria's Bob Noble, who placed third, while Dawn Wilson was the fastest of seven women entered, covering the course in just under two and-a-half hours.

Meet director Dale Erven of the Sri Chinmoy club was delighted with the country's first triathlon and said today he hopes it will become an annual event.

Over-all men's winner Eddie Smyth of Colwood — 2 hours, one minute and 11 seconds

Women's winner Dawn Wilson of Victoria — 2 hours, 28 minutes and 49 seconds





Bob Noble of Victoria — 3rd over-all

Hugh Wilson of Vancouver — 2nd over-all

TOWN TALK

Talk of the city soliciting funds from Soochow, China to help Victoria in its Chinatown revitalization program is nothing but press speculation, Ald. Bob Wright said today.

Responding to a letter to the editor of the Times chiding the city for its supposedly greedy attitude towards its new twin city, Wright said it just wasn't true.

"Reporters put two and two together and got two," joked Ald. Bill McElroy.

"At no time has anyone or this committee had any discussion about trying to put the arm on Soochow for some dollars."

However, the city is trying to put the arm on the Provincial Capital Commission, Wright said, and McElroy — a PCC member — said there will probably be some good news for the city when it meets later this month.

Waterfront watchers filled their eyes on Dallas Road Sunday when the 8,424-square metre oil rig Ocean Bounty lumbered into view being towed by the tug Smit Rotterdam.

More than 300 feet tall, the oil rig, owned by Odeco Co. of New Orleans, La., has just completed a multi-million dollar refit in Nanoose Bay, carried out by about 80 employees of Vancouver Shipyards Co. Ltd.

After dropping off a Pacific Pilotage pilot, the tug and oil rig headed out to sea. Travelling via the Straits of Magellan, the oil rig's destination is the North Sea.

Prior to the refit, the Ocean Bounty was working off Alaska.

Disabled freighter towed in

The grain-laden freighter T. Akasawa was to anchor at Royal Roads at noon today after being towed from Cape Flattery by the tugs Seaspan Master and Seaspan Navigator.

Owned by C.P. Ships of Hamilton, Bermuda, the 57,140 deadweight tonne freighter was on her way from Vancouver to Japan on Monday when she became disabled.

A spokesman for King Bros. Ltd. said she will be unable to come alongside the dock for examination because with her full cargo she draws 40 feet.

Suds go stadium-wide

Beer: desegregation

Beer drinkers have been so well-mannered in their segregated quarters at Royal Athletic Park that aldermen decided today to extend the privilege to all parts of the city-owned stadium.

"There have been no incidents of rowdiness or misuse of the privilege granted by council and it has helped to eliminate the problem of spectators bringing their own supplies into the park by devious ways and means," city recreation director Jack Morgan said.

Council on June 26 allowed the consumption of beer in a small section of the stands, after learning the practice of allowing beer to be drunk only in a small area underneath the bleachers was not working.

Morgan told council's parks and recreation committee that since imbibers were allowed in the cheap seats, more than 2,000 bottles of beer have been sold for total sales of $2,500. The city keeps the profits — Morgan did not say what the city's net proceeds were.

Aldermen approved extension of beer drinking to the rest of the stadium for a 30-day test. Beer sales are also restricted to Victoria Budgets' softball and Victoria Blues' baseball games.

In other business, council's land use planning committee extended the successful Chinatown paint-up program to three buildings outside the three-block area designated by council last fall.

Ramsay Machine Works at the foot of Fisgard, the Station Hotel at Pandora and Station and B.C. Produce Co. at 529 Pandora will receive matching funds and help from city staff on design and color schemes to clean up the exterior of their buildings.

Chief city planner Geoff Greenhalgh said the program, established with a $30,000 city fund last year, has been highly successful.

"There's been an excellent response to the paint-up scheme," he told the committee.

To date, $19,256 has been spent by the city, matching equal amounts from building owners.

Greenhalgh said it is important that the machine shop be include in the program because it will form the backdrop to the Gate of Harmonious Interest to be built at Fisgard and Government.

N-protest to balloon at Comox on Saturday

Aug. 9, 1945. Nagasaki, Japan. A United States warplane drops "Fat Man," the world's second operational atomic bomb.

Almost instantly, 75,000 people are dead, disfigured or doomed to a lifetime of radiation disease.

This Saturday is the 35th anniversary of the Nagasaki blast and organizers of a memorial protest at the Comox base of the Canadian Armed Forces hope 500 to 800 people will show up.

Demonstrators are expected from the Lower Mainland and many Vancouver Island points.

Organizing the event on the lower Island is Edith Adamson, a 66-year-old grandmother and spokesman for the Victoria Coalition for Disarmament.

Adamson wants any Victorians heading for the demonstration to meet in the Town and Country shopping centre parking lot at 9:30 a.m., the day of the protest.

"Then there will be a cavalcade to Comox," Adamson said.

She expects the 2 p.m. demonstration to be fairly brief.

Hundreds of helium-filled balloons will be released to give some inkling of how far nuclear fallout would spread if Comox was a target for an atom bomb.

Each balloon will contain a card asking the finder to mail the card to the protest organizers so that a theoretical spread of fallout can be established.

From the base, the demonstrators will make their way to Lewis Park in Courtenay where speakers can have their say.

Federal government reprentatives have been invited, Adamson said.

"But if they don't come we'll stage a puppet show," she added.

The stars of such a show would be Canada's own Punch and Judy — Pierre Trudeau and Joe Clark.

Adamson points out that Trudeau won world acclaim when he first announced years ago nuclear weapons would be removed from bases at Bagotville, Que., Chatham, N.B., and Comox.

The nuclear weapons were removed from Bagotville and Chatham but Comox still has them.

Trudeau has suggested they would be removed after the new F-18A fighter plane arrives to replace the obsolete Voodoo CF-101.

But in the recent alert that had seven Voodoos scrambling from Comox (it turned out to be a computer error and the planes were recalled by NORAD in six minutes); no planes carried nuclear weapons.

If the nuclear weapons weren't used by the Voodoos in a genuine alert Adamson wonders why they haven't been removed from Comox as Trudeau promised.

Moscow games end on sombre note

MOSCOW (CP) — The 1980 Olympic Games faded to a close, and like dying applause, Sunday, leaving the host country with a record heap of medals.

The Soviet Union wound up with 80 gold medals, obliterating its previous mark of 50 at Munich in 1972, and 195 total medals, wiping out its record of 125 set at Montreal four years ago.

And while the hosts took every opportunity to boast that the level of competition during the last two weeks was unaffected by a 36-country boycott, Sunday's equestrian jumping final, the traditional stadium showpiece just before the closing ceremony, was anything but a top-notch show.

Not one of the riders in the individual show jumping class was able to complete a clean round and Poland's Jan Kowalczyk, riding Artemor, claimed the last gold medal. None of the world's leading riders was entered because most equestrian federations had joined the boycott in protest of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Sunday's closing ceremony was the first where the flag of the next Olympic host country was not flown. The United States, leader of the boycott and host for the 1984 Games at Los Angeles, had insisted its banner not be raised anywhere at these Games and Sunday, the flag of Los Angeles was hoisted instead.

Lord Killanin, whose eight-year term as president of the International Olympic Committee ended Sunday, said in his closing address:

"I would ask the sportsmen of the world to unite in peace before a holocaust descends."

Killanin had been unable to keep politics from intruding in the Olympic movement, but he again spoke out on the subject.

"Sport must not be used for political purposes, especially when political, economic and other means have not been tried."

Killanin's words appeared in Russian on a giant television screen at one end of the stadium and he was warmly applauded by a crowd of more than 100,000.

Killanin stood on a rostrum at the side of the vast arena and declared the Games closed.

The hosts put on a colorful display of marching bandsmen, flag bearers, and dancers in picturesque costumes of the peoples of the Soviet Union. Fireworks burst over the stadium and the salute of guns was fired from the banks of the Moscow River a few hundred yards away.

But for sports excitement, fans needed to hark back to Friday's dramatic closing track and field events and a handful of other highlights during the first 12 days of the Games.

After Friday's second of two clashes between British runners Sebastian Coe and Steve Ovett, a second gold medal by distance runner Miruts Yifter of Ethiopia and a world record high jump by East German Gerd Wessig, Saturday's program was anti-climactic.

The 11 boxing finals were the feature of the Saturday schedule, with Cuban Teofilo Stevenson winning his third consecutive Olympic heavyweight title, the first Olympic boxer ever to win three in the same weight division.

Stevenson decisioned Soviet boxer Pyotr Zaev, leading a Cuban team that came away with six gold medals while the Soviet Union managed to gain only one — light flyweight Shamil Sabyrov who beat Cuban Hypolito Ramos.

Other Cuban winners were bantamweight Juan Hernandez, lightweight Angel Herrera, welterweight Andres Adalma, light middleweight Armando Martinez and middleweight Jose Gomez.

Italian Patrizzio Oliva was named the best boxer of the tournament after he won the light welterweight title over Serik Konakbaev of the Soviet Union. Other winners were flyweight Petar Lessov of Bulgaria, featherweight Rudi Fink of East Germany and light heavyweight Slobodan Kacar of Yugoslavia.

Czechoslovakia claimed only its second gold medal of the Games in Saturday's rain-soaked soccer final with substitute Jinrich Svoboda scoring the winning goal in a 1-0 victory over defending champion East Germany. It was the Czechoslovaks' first ever Olympic soccer title.

Tomi Poikolainen of Finland won the men's archery gold medal Saturday and Keto Losaberidze of the Soviet Union won the women's title while East German paddlers won two of five men's canoeing finals.

Soviet paddler Vladimir Parfenovich won his third gold medal, teaming with Sergei Chukhrai in kayak pairs over 1,000 metres. The same two had earlier won the kayak pairs over 500 metres and Parfenovich won the 500-metre kayak singles.

Mighty display as Games close

MOSCOW (AP) — The politically battered 1980 Olympic Games came to a colorful, cheerful close Sunday but with an ominous warning from the man who has guided the Olympic movement for the last eight years.

"I would ask the sportsmen of the world to unite in peace before a holocaust descends," said Lord Killanin of Ireland, the outgoing president of the International Olympic Committee.

Killanin had spent years trying to prove that politics and sport do not mix. But this year, unquestionably, they did when 36 countries kept their athletes away in protest of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Again at the closing ceremony, Killanin insisted: "Sport must not be used for political purposes, especially when political, economic and other means have not been tried."

Killanin's words appeared in Russian on a giant television screen at one end of the stadium and he was warmly applauded by a crowd of more than 100,000.

Present at the ceremonies were a large number of senior Soviet government officials, including Premier Alexei Kosygin.

Moscow television, which provided the international television feed, broadcast the closing ceremony without the caution it showed in televising the opening festivities July 19. TV cameras Sunday showed 16 of the 81 countries marching with Olympic instead of national flags to show their disapproval of Soviet actions in Afghanistan. Such shots had been avoided in broadcasting the Games opening.

Killanin stood on a rostrum at the side of the vast rena and declared the Games closed.

A representative selection of athletes — about 700 out of the 5,000 who competed — marched informally together in one group instead of country-by-country.

The Russians put on a mighty display of marching bandsmen, flag bearers, girls in Greek dresses and dancers in picturesque costumes of the peoples of the Soviet Union. Fireworks burst over the stadium and the salute of guns was fired from the banks of the Moscow River a few hundred yards away.

A big, moving protrait of Misha the bear, the cuddly looking 1980 Olympic mascot, had tears coming from its eyes, apparently to show that he was sad the Games were ending. The image was created by hundreds of people forming a card section in the massive Lenin Stadium,

The official mascot of the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles will be an eagle with the patriotic name of Sam.

A red, white and blue star also was unveiled in Los Angeles Monday as the official emblem of the 1984 Games by mayor Tom Bradley and members of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee.

The announcement kicked off a 24-city tour to introduce Sam the eagle and the colorful emblem, said LAOOC chairman Paul Ziffren.

Ziffren said the star, in motion, "symbolizes the competition of the 1984 Games." The eagle, he said, "graphically reflects the ideals cited in the Olympic motto, 'citius, altius, fortius (faster, higher, stronger).'"

All Olympic dope tests conducted at Moscow werehere have been negative, the International Olympic Committee (IOC) announced Sunday.

Prince Alexandre de Merode, Belgian chairman of the IOC's medical commission, told a press conference that 800 tests for anabolic steroids had been carried out and that there had been more than 1,600 tests for other banned substances.

"There were no positive results among the tests on athletes. I think these Olympics have been the cleanest ever as far as doping is concerned."

But Prof. Arnold Beckett, a British member of the medical commission and a leading authority on anabolic steroids, said the use of testosterone remained a problem.

Beckett said he considered it was possible to detect the presence of all synthetic steroids, which are used by athletes to build muscle and increase aggression.

But he said there was reason to believe that competitors were now using testosterone, a natural male hormone which is present in all men and to a lesser extent in women.

"It is possible that in 12 months we'll be able to test for testosterone and the loophole may be closed," he added.

Fourteen Olympic champions, including six Russians, were giving Olympic boycotters an opportunity for revenge today in an athletics meet at Rome's Olympic Stadium.

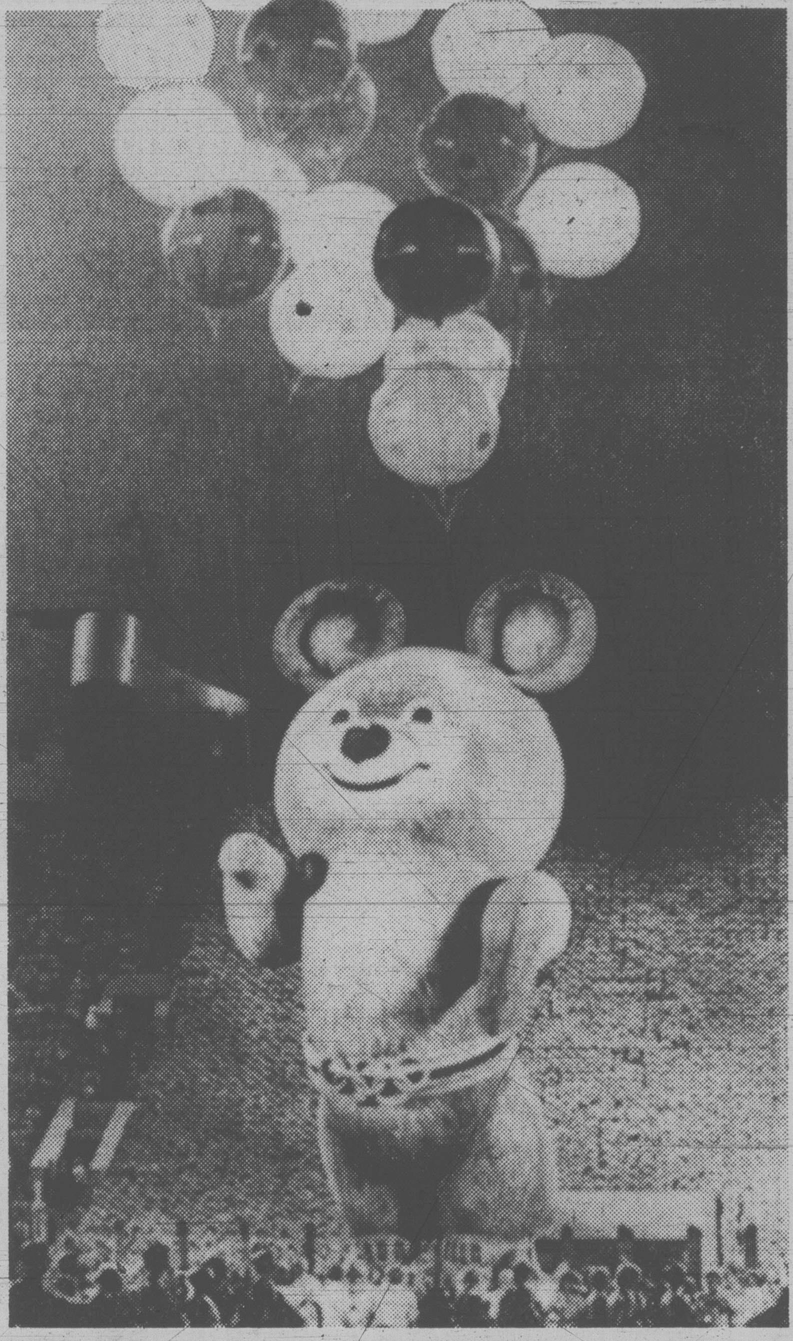
U.S., Canadian, West German, Japanese and Kenyan competitors in the Golden Gala are trying to prove they could have been potential medal contenders if their countries had not boycotted the Games.

The Olympic champions are seeking evidence their gold medals were deserved.

"One should ban any political implication and interpretation, however," an Italian organizer said. "It is a major sporting event including top aces who are going to produce top performances, we hope."

Among the women's events, Italian Sara Simeoni, Olympic champion and world record holder, will oppose Canadian Debbie Brill and American Louise Ritter in the high jump.

Edwin Moses, who led an 80-member U.S. team to Rome, was a strong favorite in the 400-metre hurdles, in which Russian Vasily Arkhipenko, silver medalist in Moscow, should be his toughest opponent. Moses set a world record of 47.13 seconds during a meet in Milan last month.



FINAL CURTAIN CALL is taken by Misha the bear during spectacular closing cermonies of Olympic Games Sunday in Moscow's Lenin Stadium. Lifted by helium-filled balloons, mascot of summer games floated out of stadium and soft-landed in Moscow meadow about four hours later.

Blues' streak cracked by Bryant and Padres

Neil Bryant and Paul Kirsch have preferences of a varying nature.

The 19-year-old Bryant would love to get plenty of pitching assignments against Victoria Blues.

It wouldn't matter to Kirsch, who has been showing great disdain for any pitcher to throw against him in Northwest Baseball League circles this season.

Bryant, a lefthander, went the distance Monday to gain credit for the pitching decision as Walla Walla Padres clipped Victoria 8-4 at Royal Athletic Park to break off a four-game Blues win streak.

The last time Bryant faced the Blues, he ho-hummed his way to a smart, one-hit 17-0 victory.

But for all his good work against the Blues, the slender southpaw has managed only a 4-4, won-lost record this season.

Kirsch hit Bryant hardest. A man on a tear, the outfielder's three-run homer in the fourth inning accounted for most of Victoria's offense.

Since joining the Blues back on July 20, Kirsch has been failing NWL pitchers at a sensational clip — 34-for-70 for a .486 average.

But Kirsch's bat couldn't shore up the chink in Victoria's pitching. Starter Dave Weis and reliever Mark Liber were racked for 17 hits as the charging Padres connected for at least one hit in every inning.

The Padres, who cut down North Division-leading Bellingham Mariners in two of three games earlier in the weekend, got three hits from Jim Thomas and George Perez and a solo homer from Pat Casey.

It was a disappointing series start for Victoria. Teams meet again tonight and Wednesday and then Blues face Bellingham in a series that could turn the Northern Division race for first plce into a dogfight.

Bill Johnson surrendered a two-out, bases-loaded walk on a 3-2 pitch to Joe Lorenz in the 10th inning Sunday to give Blues a 5-4 victory over Central Oregon Phillies and provided Victoria with a four-game sweep.

Winning pitcher Ken Klacza went the distance, striking out seven batters and walking only one but surrendering home runs to Juan Samuel and Jerry Willard.

Lorenz also homered for Victoria.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers have optioned pitcher John Flinn to their Vancouver farm club in the Pacific Coast League.

British athletes get rousing welcome home

LONDON (AP) — British medal winners returning from the Moscow Olympic Games were given rousing receptions in their hometowns Sunday, despite government disapproval.

Standing 10 deep in places, thousands of people lined the streets of Edinburgh in steady rain to cheer 28-year-old Allan Wells as he rode with his family in an open-top bus to the city centre.

Wells won a gold medal in the 100-metre sprint and silver in the 200.

In the English steel city of Sheffield, a banner outside the home of 1,500-metre champion Sebastian Coe, 23, read: "Welcome home our golden boy."

Scottish relay runner Linsey Macdonald, at 16 the Olympics' youngest track bronze medalist, woke up to a big welcome in Dunfermline from her neighbors, who prepared a street party.

Eating a piece of chocolate cake, she said she was bored by the Russian food, "which was very much the same most days."

Scottish municipal authorities planned civic receptions for Wells. Some Conservative Party councilmen say they won't attend in deference to the wishes of Tory Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who backed U.S. President Jimmy Carter's boycott of the Games.

Aerial display due in Lion-Stamp test

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pass defenders will be in the spotlight tonight as British Columbia Lions and Calgary Stampeders battle it out for second place in the Canadian Football League's Western Conference.

Stampeders, now 2-2 in the young season, have had problems in their last two games with their pass rush, a strong point last year.

And B.C. cornerback Leon Bright, who had difficulty defending against Edmonton Eskimos' Brian Kelly in the Lions' game Wednesday, will be trying again to learn more about his new position. Lions have a 2-1 record.

Edmonton, the only undefeated team in the CFL with three wins, dumped B.C. 33-21 in that game with Kelly scoring two touchdowns and picking up 233 yards on seven receptions.

Stampeders, dumped 35-18 last week by Winnipeg Blue Bombers, did some soul-searching after that loss, and defensive line coach Marvin Bass finds the lack of a pass rush upsetting.

"We just haven't come off the ball with the same velocity," Bass said. "You search for a reason, you wonder what it is. But this should be the strongest part of our team."

Tackle Ed McAleney, who led the CFL in quarterback sacks last year, is off to a slow start as is end Reggie Lewis. Ken Dombrowski has been hampered by a hyper-extended knee. End Ronnie Paggett, a rookie from Louisiana Tech, has been the most consistent, Bass says.

Bass says a week of solid practice has made him feel better.

From the offensive viewpoint, Stampeders have their eye on Bright, a former wide receiver. Calgary wide receiver Tom Forzani says he expects to test Bright tonight.

"On film, we saw how he got beat by Kelly and we'll see how much he's learned in a week," Forzani said.

"I know he was a great athlete on offence as a wide receiver and the only way I'd switch to the corner is if the quarterback didn't have any arms and had to hand off with his feet," Forzani said.

In Eastern Conference action, Hamilton Tiger-Cats are playing Ottawa Rough Riders in Ottawa.

Surrey takes midget crown

NORTH SURREY (CP) — Surrey defeated Burnaby 14-9 to take the Canadian midget lacrosse championship Saturday.

North Vancouver edged New Westminster 12-9 to take third place in the A division of the week-long tournament.

Endurance record

TOKYO (AP) — Sachio Kinugasa, 33, an infielder with Toyo Carp, has set a Japanese League baseball record by playing in his 1,247th consecutive game.

Sports tonight

Softball, baseball and lacrosse, some of them at playoff stage, are on the sports program for fans in Greater Victoria tonight. And for the stay-at-homes, there's B.C. Lions' football on the radio.

In baseball, Victoria Blues play Walla Walla Padres in a Northwest League game at 7 at Royal Athletic Park.

Softball playoffs continue at Heywood Avenue Park where the Heywood Men's League is in the semi-final stage, at Macdonald Park in the Macdonald Men's League and at Hyacinth Park in the Victoria-Saanich Women's League. And at Central Park, it's Tally Ho versus Royal Oak Inn in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League. All games start at 6:30.

For lacrosse fans, there's a choice between watching a Western Canada Junior League game between Burnaby Cablevision and Esquimalt Legion at the Esquimalt Sports Centre and a South Island Senior "B" League playoff game between Esquimalt Universal Sheet Metal and G. and W. Landscaping at Pearkes Arena. Both of those start at 8.

Burrows return to power gives Budgets playoff lift

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Bob Burrows is back, and the return of Mr. Crunch to the Victoria Budgets' lineup couldn't come at a better time.

It really doesn't matter that Burrows helped power the defending provincial senior men's softball champions to a six-game sweep of their "Super Series" at Royal Athletic Park at the weekend.

Super Series exhibitions, while entertaining, are basically meaningless.

What matters to field manager Harvey Stevenson and the Budgets is that important playoffs are just around the corner, and the thunder of Burrows' bat — if it continues — is going to be a sweet sound for Victoria's cause.

Budgets, with a final exhibition tuneup scheduled Wednesday at Central Park against the Stuffy McGinnis League all-stars, host the Northwest League playoffs at Royal Athletic Park next weekend, then head for the mainland the following week to defend their provincial crown.

And if Burrows' bat thunders as it did at the weekend, life could prove to be delightful for Stevenson.

Returning to Victoria this season after a one-season fling in the pro Western Canada League, the big guy really couldn't find the home-run range that thrilled Victoria audiences in past seasons. For one thing, Burrows suffered a broken bone in his left (non-throwing) arm.

He returned after about a month of inactivity, but admitted the injury bothered his swing to some extent. Heading into the past weekend, he managed only two home runs and was batting a modest .264 with 24 hits in 91 official at-bats.

Bygone medicority was forgotten at Burrows terrorized rival hurlers in old-time fashion to spark Budgets to a four-game sweep over Portland Ray Bristow (7-4 in 14 innings, 6-1, 7-3 and 4-3) and a pair of victories (3-2 and 5-2) over Decatur, Ill.

All Burrows did was to pound out four homers, a double and four singles in 19 official trips for a lusty .475 average. He drove in seven runs and scored 11 while boosting his overall season's average to an even .300.

Indeed, it was Mr. Crunch back to old-time form.

Southpaw Mark Smith, claiming three of the six victories, became Victoria's first 20-game winner (20-5), unbeaten Rob Guenter extended his record to 14-0 with a pair of wins while Dave Wilson won his 11th game.

Decatur	000 000 2 — 2	6 0
Victoria	100 200 x — 3	4 0

David Scott and Mark Bateman; Rob Guenter 14-0 and Alden Govenlock.

Second game:

Decatur	200 000 0 — 2	6 1
Victoria	010 040 x — 5	4 2

Gary Endres and Gary Scharf; Mark Smith 20-5 Bob Burrows. Home run: Burrows.

SUNDAY

Portland	100 101 0 — 2	10 2
Victoria	203 110 x — 7	10 0

Dan Woodman, Virg Harstad (5) and Mark Freels, John Aarhus (4); Dave Wilson 11-7 and Govenlock. Home runs: Victoria — Govenlock, Dennis Eckert.

Second game:

Portland	000 102 0 — 3	7 0
Victoria	100210 x — 4	7 0

Gary Earnest and Tim Norton; Smith 19-5, Guenter (6) and Burrows. Home run: Burrows.

SATURDAY

Portland	020 001 000 100 0 — 4	11 1
Victoria	010 200 000 100 3 — 7	19 3

Earnest, Woodman (5) and Aarhus; Wilson, Smith 18-5 (6) and Govenlock. Home runs: Portland - Bob Jones; Victoria — Burrows.

Second game:

Victoria	302 100 x — 6	7 0

Harstad and Norton. Guenter 13-0 and Burrows. Home run: Victoria — Burrows.

Chinaglia nets two for Cosmos

Times News Services

Giorgio Chinaglia scored two goals and added an assist to lift New York Cosmos to a 4-1 victory over Los Angeles Aztecs in a North American Soccer League game at East Rutherford, N.J., Sunday night.

Chinaglia, the NASL scoring leader, registered his 27th and 28th goals of the season and added his 10th assist as the Cosmos won their third straight game and improved their record to 19-7.

At Seattle, Saturday, Roger Davies, back after a one-game suspension, scored the only goal as Seattle Sounders avenged an earlier North American Soccer League loss to Vancouver with a 1-0 victory over the Whitecaps.

Wills takes over as Seattle's pilot

By The Associated Press

"I wish we could have won, but the ship's not going to sink tonight," Maury Wills said Monday after his unsuccessful debut as a major league baseball manager.

But if Wills had consulted the standings, he would have seen that the ship — alias Seattle Mariners — did indeed sink — into last place in the American League's West Division.

The defending champion California Angels rallied in the late innings to hand the Mariners their 10th consecutive setback, 8-3. Seattle has lost 21 of 25 games since the all-star break — and the skid enabled California to climb out of last place for the first time since June 6.

"Before the game, I thought I would be shaking like a leaf when I took out the lineup card, but I wasn't," said Wills, who became the third black manager in major league history shortly after the Mariners fired Darrell Johnson. "I felt relaxed, maybe I shouldn't have."

Jason Thompson doubled twice to drive in three runs for California. His two-run double broke a 3-3 tie with two out in the bottom of the seventh.

Joe Charboneau, Jorge Orta, Bo Diaz and Rick Manning all homered to pace Cleveland to its 10th victory in the last 12 games, an 11-5 victory over Toronto Blue Jays.

Elsewhere in the AL, Reggie Jackson continued his torrid hitting by slamming his 30th home run of the season and 399th of his career as New York Yankees pounded the Texas Rangers 10-4. Jackson's homer off Dave Rajsich tied him with Al Kaline for 19th place on the all-time list.

In the National, Tom Seaver, sidelined for more than a month, returned to the Cincinnati lineup with a flourish Monday and the Reds managed to stay right in the thick of the West Division pennant race.

Seaver pitched six innings, struck out five batters and held San Diego to four hits and one unearned run as Cincinnati, riding home runs by George Foster and Johnny Bench, snapped the Padres' eight-game winning streak with a 7-1 victory in the opener of a twi-night doubleheader.

The Reds ran roughshod over the Padres, 11-2, in the second game.

Elsewhere Montreal Expos traded 4-3 victories with New York Mets but retained a two-game lead over idle Pittsburgh Pirates in the East Division.

Heart tourney hits record high

The 'heart' was bigger than ever in the third annual Heart Fund tournament that was staged Sunday by the Uplands Golf Club.

Again boosted greatly by donations from business firms and individuals in the Victoria area, proceeds from the tourney hit a record high, topping last year's total by at least $2,000. Tournament co-chairmen Gordon Pellow and Ken Keating expect that more than $8,500 will go to charities related to the B.C. Heart Foundation and an unconfirmed donation offer might send the count considerably higher.

Taking the top prize in the tourney, which was contested by 43 four-man teams on a best-ball, handicap basis, was the quartet of Bruce Rands, Don Farquhar, Ed Fellner and Harry Caton, who won on a countback after finishing in a tie at net 53 with the foursome of Gary Taylor, Bill Harris, Ted Parkins and Howie Cockman.

Jim Taylor, Rob Wilson, Jack Irving and Gordon MacKay combined for a best-ball 68 to win the team low-gross award, Joe Burns took individual handicap honors with a net 63 and Bob Fowles, shooting a one-over-par 71, topped the individual low-gross list.

Tewell selects high standards

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — For a guy who was ready to give up golf for a new life last year, Doug Tewell has set some high standards for himself.

Tewell won the $45,000 first prize Sunday in the $250,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic by one stroke over veteran Tom Kite with a 12-under-par 272.

Tewell fired a 67 over the final 18 holes, Kite a 70.

Two strokes behind were Lou Graham (71), Calvin Peete (68), Ben Crenshaw (70), Jack Renner (70) and Fuzzy Zoeller (69).

"I'm trying to mold a career for myself like the standard set by Tom Watson," said Tewell, who talked about his golf goals.

Watson is the Professional Golfers' Association tour's top money-winner with $387,725, and is third to Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino in career earnings.

His $45,000 first prize money brought Tewell's season total to $152,392 and his career bankroll to $245,135.

Cox surges to top spot

LANGLEY (CP) — Bob Cox of Richmond came from four shots off the pace Sunday to win the $11,000 West Country Open golf tournament in this Lower Fraser Valley community.

Cox, who made up five shots to win the Manitoba Open two weeks ago, edged fellow-pro Mark Ludeman of Vancouver by a stroke as he finished with a two-over-par total of 136 for the 36-hole event.

Cox earned $1,100 and Ludeman took home $700.

Sandra caps rally with chip-in birdie

WHEELING, W. Va. (AP) — Sandra Post, ending a 1980 victory drought, capped a remarkable rally Sunday by sinking a 30-foot chip shot on the third playoff hole to defeat Donna Caponi Young for the championship of the $100,00 West Virginia Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Post, picking up $15,000 for her sudden-death win, and Young both fired final-round 73s for 54-hole totals of 211, five under par.

Young, who had led the final round from the first hole to the 17th, missed short putts on both the 18th and first playoff holes to let victory slip away.

She also missed a 10-footer on the second playoff hole.

Young, playing consistently well for most of her final round on a soggy Speidel Golf Course, was shaken by the 375-yard, par-four 17th hole. Leading Post by two shots going into the 17th in regulation play, she two-putted from eight feet for a bogey, allowing Post to pull even with a tricky, eight-foot birdie putt.

After Post's chip-in birdie on the third extra hole, Young missed her putt and her chances of a fourth 1980 tour victory.

"All I needed was one putt and I couldn't get it," said the visibly-shaken Young, who could have wrested the 1980 money-winning lead away from Amy Alcott with a victory.

Brenda Lunsford of Winnipeg completed a strong LPGA debut as she finished with a 75 for a 221 total, pocketing $1,160.

Steady visitor ahead at finish

Consistency paid off for Joe Runte.

The visitor from Sand Point, Wash., was a portrait of steadiness as he put together a pair of par-matching 72s Saturday and Sunday to capture low-gross honors in the annual Labatt's Esquimalt Amateur tournament at Gorge Vale Golf Club.

Runte's 36-hole count of 144 was two strokes better than the totals of Vancouver Island Open champion Stu Holroyd and Gorge clubmate Dave Donaldson. Holroyd, who opened with a 75, fired a 71 Sunday for the only sub-par performance on the recently-upgraded Gorge course.

Gorge Vale's Barry McCue turned a great start into a three-stroke victory in the handicap division. Scoring a nifty 78-15 — 63 Saturday, McCue came back with an 87-15 — 72 Sunday but still finished three shots ahead of clubmates Gerry Walker, Al Shumka, Terry Moody and Ed Walters.

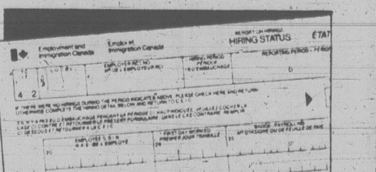
We're tightening up on people who abuse Unemployment Insurance.

Most people getting unemployment insurance play by the rules. But some people don't seem to know that they can't take a job and collect benefits without telling us they're working. That's why employers are being asked to send us the starting date and Social Insurance Number or extracts from computer payroll tapes for each employee they hire or rehire. This information is cross-checked with the Social Insurance Numbers of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface. After investigation, anyone found receiving benefits to which they are not entitled will have to repay them.

It may be an honest mistake. Some people forget or don't understand they must tell Unemployment Insurance and report their total earnings when they start a new job. In that case, repayment is all that's required. But, a penalty or prosecution may follow when the new system detects people wrongly collecting benefits.

If you are collecting unemployment insurance benefits, and start a new job, please say so on your UI claimant report card.



Social Insurance Numbers of newly-hired employees are now being cross-checked with those of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface.

Bouvier, Quinlan share honors as consistency key to runners

By BILL WALKER

Driver Jerome Bouvier took a sliver of the spotlight away from veteran Keith Quinlan and three highly consistent runners at Sandown Raceway Monday.

Bouvier, of Port Coquitlam scored his maiden victory as a harness racing driver and narrowly missed getting his second before a holiday crowd of 2,332, second highest of the season.

And the punters will probably recall both races very well, as they provided the day's biggest rewards.

Meanwhile, Quinlan scored with three winners including the five-year old bay mare Sweet Angie ($8.00) in the ninth while Ben Quest, Mark Doc and Shady Hill Vicki kept their streaks active and patrons pleased.

For Bouvier, his initial win came on the bay horse Lang Dominion, who went wire to wire in the first race and returned $23.00.

But in the 10th and triactor race, Bouvier almost made it a day to remember. He brought the nine-year old brown gelding Irish Stadt at 12-1 to within a neck of scoring an upset win over one of the public picks, Baron Lea A ($7.20).

As it was, Baron Lea A, a 10-year old brown gelding, had to come with a rush in the stretch to cop the decision, and combined with Irish Stadt and Noble Meter for a healthy triactor of $1,131.90.

Quinlan scored with a well-timed move on Sweet Angie in the ninth as Pegassus Ernie nipped Shirley Mohawk for the place in the $2,300 preferred event.

Quinlan's other victory came with Ben Quest ($4.90) in the fourth and Recount Time ($9.20) in the sixth. It was the fourth straight win for Ben Quest, an eight-year old chestnut gelding.

In the co-featured preferred eighth, Mark Doc ($4.30), a seven-year old chestnut gelding, driven by Grant Hollingsworth and moving up in class, became the newest darling of the fans with a fourth straight victory. Mr. Graham Bell was second.

And speasking of favorites, the amazingly consistent Shady Hill Vicki, a four-year old brown mare, owned by Pat Lundy and driven by leading driver Joe Hudon, won her seventh in 10 starts here, to go with a second and third-place finish, with a tremendouse closing surge that barely nipped the pacesetting Call 'N Raise at the wire.

Shady Hill Vicki returned $3.40 on a day devoted mostly to favorites.

The crowd total was second only to the July 1 throng of 2,545 while the mutuel handle was also a second best — $175,378 compared to the record $180,612 also established on July 1.

Racing resumes Thursday.

WENDY BARLOW
. . . loses in doubles final

Wendy Barlow captures Canadian singles crown

OTTAWA (CP) - Wendy Barlow of Victoria, who had ousted top-seeded Ottawa ace Marjorie Blackwood in Saturday's semi-finals, captured the women's singles title Sunday in the Canadian closed tennis championships by crushing Karen Dewis of London, Ont., 6-3, 6-0.

Currently training and residing in Toronto, Barlow defeated Blackwood 6-3, 7-5, but Dewis thwarted hopes of an all-Victoria final by charging from behind to topple second-seeded Nina Bland in a 6-7, 6-4, 6-2 struggle.

Barlow was not as fortunate when she teamed with Dewis in the women's doubles final, losing a hard-fought 6-3, 5-7, 6-4 decision to Blackwood and Helene Pelletier of Quebec City.

In Sunday's battle for the men's singles crown, Greg Halder of Toronto defeated Martin Wostenholme of Ottawa 6-3, 6-1.

Halder, 25, combined a very strong forehand with a deadly-accurate backhand in his relatively easy win over Wostenholme, 17.

In the semi-final round Saturday, Halder bested Francois Synaeghel of Montreal 6-4, 6-4, and Wostenholme outlasted Quebec's Stephane Bonneau 6-2, 4-6, 7-5.

He now heads back to Toronto and the Canadian Open tennis championships, Aug. 11-18. His competition will be formidable with Bjorn Borg of Sweden and American John McEnroe among the confirmed entrants. Jimmy Connors of the U.S. may also enter.

Cougars make bid for all-star game

The Western Hockey League will revive its annual all-star game and it appears the 1981 renewal will be staged on the West Coast.

Cougar manager-coach Jack Shupe said both Victoria and New Westminster Bruins are interested in staging the game Jan. 20.

New Westminster appears to be first in line but because of a scheduled National League game between Vancouver and Toronto Maple Leafs on Jan.20, the Bruins may not be able to obtain Pacific Coliseum.

"We're prepared to hold the game and annual dinner here if New Westminster can't get the Coliseum," said Shupe, adding that league approval "should be only a formality."

Victoria last staged the all-star game in 1975 but the league dropped the game following the 1977-78 season because it felt the affair was becoming too expensive to stage.

Rain cancels senior finale

PRINCE GEORGE — Rain threw the most effective curve Monday and the British Columbia Amateur Baseball Association may have to make a committee-room play to decide if Victoria or Enderby will represent the province at the Western Canada senior championships.

Both Enderby and Victoria were unbeaten after two starts and were to decide a B.C. champion Monday. Rain, however, forced cancellation of the tournament final.

Victoria reached the final by clubbing Trail 14-6 in an abbreviated, five-inning game Sunday.

Trail, outhitting Victoria 12-9, struck for five of its runs in the third inning but Ron Holmes, coming on in relief of starter Dale Aune, cut off the threat and hurled scorless ball in the final two innings.

Mike Baier and Mark Lawless each had two hits. Baier drove in five runs while Lawless, who homered, drove in three. Glen Smith and Garry Brooke each scored three times.

Nettles hit by hepatitis

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Third-baseman Craig Nettles of New York Yankees of baseball's American League has been found to have hepatitis and may be sidelined for as long as a month.

Nettles, batting .244, complained of weakness last weekend and at the time was thought to have a virus. He saw a doctor when the team played at Minnesota earlier this week, but laboratory tests were inconclusive.

He saw another doctor Thursday and the diagnosis of hepatitis was disclosed shortly before the Yankees played their game with the Brewers.

Rowe sets masters' mark; Creery, Campbell victors

Mike Creery and Debbie Campbell were winners in senior (open) company, seven athletes in the 17-and-under racked up victories in their specialties but, among Victorians competing in British Columbia track and field championships on the mainland, it was hard to top Jack Rowe's efforts.

Rowe, competing in the 55-59 age division of the masters meet at Bear Creek Park in Surrey, set a Canadian record in the 110 hurdles and captured three other events.

Rowe clipped a half second off the former mark held by Ontario's Max Pickle in winning the hurdles in 20.8 seconds.

The Flying Y veteran also won the 400 hurdles (71.7), the 400 (63.1) and 200 (28.0) metres.

Creery, capping a tactical duel with John Hill of Vancouver by breaking away with about seven laps remaining, captured the open 10,000 metres championship for the second successive year.

Creery won with a time of 30 minutes, 33.6 seconds, winning by more than 20 seconds ahead of Hill. Ken Jordan of Vancouver was third.

Campbell won the women's 400 in 56.8 and was second in the 800 with a time of 2:07.3.

Middle-distance ace Brit McRoberts and hammer-thrower Scott Neilson took top individual honors.

McRoberts, a 23-year-old Coquitlam runner who recently returned from a series of competitions in Europe, captured the women's 800 metres with a personal best of 2:06.3 and then went on to win the 1,500 metres in 4:13.7, to earn the award as the event's top female athlete.

Neilson failed in a bid to break his own North American hammer throw record of 72.94 metres, falling well short at 69.50 in his best toss. But the New Westminster strongman was still nine metres ahead of his nearest rival and won the top male athlete award.

Top two finishers in most senior events qualify for the Western Canada regionals to be held Aug. 15-17 in Saskatoon.

Other Victoria performances:

SENIOR DIVISION

Debbie Scott, second in women's 1,500 (4:15.3).

Al Sheridan, second in 110 hurdles (15.0).

Terry Bateman, third in 3,000 steeplechase (9:26.4).

Harold Willers, second in hammer throw (61.84 metres).

Darren Ash, second in 400 hurdles (55.5).

MASTERS

Garth Ball, first in (40-44) 10,000 metres (34.05.4).

Bob Anderson, first in (45-49) 400 (63.6) and 800 (2:22.4) metres and long jump (4.2 metres), second in 100 (13.3).

Walter Jenkins, first in (55-59) hammer throw (32.42).

Robert A. Martin, second in (40-44) 200 (26.3) and third in 100 (12.8).

JUVENILE (16-17)

David Coey, first in 3,000 metres (9:03.5).

Don Ball, first in pole vault (3.41).

JUNIOR DEVELOPMENT
(At Richmond)

Hardave Lail, 9, first in 100 (14.8), 200 (31.8) and long jump (3.67).

Brad Dorohoy, 14, first in 100 (12.2) and 200 (24.5).

Vito Morra, 13, first in long jump (4.79).

Mark Horak, 11, first in long jump (4.49).

Ken Wilmhurst, 14, first in 800 (2:04.7) and 1,500 (4:17.3).

Breakers take playoff

Island Dryco Breakers and Bemister's Welding will represent the Victoria-Saanich League in the B.C. senior "B" women's softball championship tournament next weekend at Hyacinth Park.

Breakers captured the No.1 berth by defeating Bemister's 3-2 and then 8-0 in league playoffs Sunday after earlier downing New York, New York 2-1.

Pam Jones was winning pitcher in all three victories, hurling a four-hitter and striking out six batters against New York, New York, giving up five hits and striking out five in the 3-2 win over Bemister's and then throwing up a three-hitter and striking out seven in the last game.

Barb Bissenden, who was two for three at the plate, scored the winning run in the bottom of the sixth inning against New York, New York and in the 3-2 decision over Bemister's, Sue Molliett scored the winner in the bottom of the eighth.

Breakers won the double knockout playoffs with three wins and one loss while Bemister's finished second to earn the second berth and host-team honors.

Other teams in the provincial tourney will be from Kamloops, Nelson, Vernon, Nanaimo, Richmond, Prince George and Vancouver.

Also on Sunday, Butler Brothers blasted Victoria Athletics 10-1 to win the city's best-of-three intermediate "A" playoff final in two straight games.

Triangle and Nanaimo tangle in semi-finals

VANCOUVER (CP) — A two-run homer by Dan Woodley in the bottom of the fifth inning powered Victoria Triangle to a 3-1 victory over Coquitlam in the B.C. Little League baseball playoffs Monday.

Winning pitcher was Steve Beddows, who tossed a six-hitter. Mark Michaud pitched a seven-hitter in a losing cause.

In other games, two runs in the top of the sixth inning and a two-hitter by Jeff Schwab sparked Vancouver's Victoria Drive to a 2-0 victory over Prince George. Kent Greves pitched a five-hitter and took the hard-luck loss.

Behind the two-hit pitching of Scott McCulloch, Lynn Valley powered to a convincing 10-1 victory over Nanaimo.

Victoria meets Nanaimo in the semi-finals today.

Jalopy pilots disqualified

Al Vanderbyl conquered a nine-car super stock field and Gordie Stone emerged as the class of a 20-car stocker field but it may take a day or two to define the winners of Monday's jalopy main event at Western Speedway.

Rocky Collins, capping a seemingly-profitable afternoon, and John Almond appeared to finish 1-2. The two, however, were disqualified for passing under a yellow (caution) flag.

Collins and car clearly dominated the jalopy field, setting a track record in the qualifying trials, then winning the fast dash and first heat.

Vanderbyl, the fastest qualifier, beat out Larry Pollard and third-place finishing Craig Dyson in the super-stock main.

Greatest sentimental applause, however, went to Ross Surgenor. Returning after a two-year layoff, Surgenor showed old-time form by winning the fast dash.

Jim Caudwell won the first heat.

Stone capped a big weekend by beating out Dale Taylor in the stocker main.

Stone out-duelled Greg Gicas in an exciting stretch battle to take the checkered flag in Saturday's main event.

Collins again topped the jalopy class.

Old-timers returning to the track turned in an entertaining program with Fraser Carmichael winning fast time, John Currier and Dave Gill taking heat races and Ray Pottinger prevailing in the main event.

MONTREAL (CP) — Running back David Green of Montreal Alouettes has been placed on the Canadian Football League's 30-day injury list because of a damaged right knee.

Victoria crews take six golds

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — Victoria City Rowing Club placed second behind St. Catharines of Ontario when the Canadian Amateur Rowing Association championships ended Sunday.

The St. Catharines oarsmen finished the two-day CARA competitions with 11 golds, seven second-place silvers and eight third-place bronze including special events in which West German crews were entered. The regatta attracted 700 competitors from 40 clubs.

Victoria City crews placed second in the overall standings with six firsts, five silvers and three bronze.

St. Catharines RC was victorious Sunday in the men's lightweight quad sculls and the lightweight doubles as well as in FISA events — lightweight fours and lightweight eights.

Victoria City posted victories in two special FISA events Sunday — women's double and men's double — while Ridley took the men's heavy four and women's quad sculls, London RC the men's lightweight cox four and men's youth pairs.

Victoria City won four golds Saturday, three of them in women's events. They were the doubles, singles and lightweight doubles. The other win was in the men's heavy singles.

The Victoria crews also picked up three silvers Saturday to go with the two they collected Sunday and the club had one third-place Saturday as well as the two third-place finishes on the last day.

Profitable fight

DETROIT (AP) — Promoters of the World Boxing Association welterweight championship fight last Saturday between Thomas Hearns and Pipino Cuevas say they expect to rake in more than $1.8 million in profits.

Joe Louis Arena gatekeepers collected $880,000 from the 11,500 fans who watched Hearns knock out Cuevas in the second round and win the title, said promoter Sammie Marshall, of Muhammed Ali Professional Sports.

Closed-circuit television contracts should bring in $1.8 million from California viewers and another $1 million from Texas, Marshall said. He said other outlets have not yet reported their take.

Cuevas was guaranteed $1.5 million, $750,000 of that tax-free, while Hearns earned $500,000.

Burnaby Cablevision defeated Richmond Roadrunners 10-8 at home Sunday to move to within one point of second place in the Western Canadian Junior Lacrosse League standing.

Richmond remains in second with 24, one more than Burnaby and 10 behind front-running New Westminster.

Dan McLenaghen scored four goals and two assists for Burnaby while Doug Deschner added three goals and two assists.

Jim Northey scored a pair for the Runners, who preserved their hold on second by clipping Coquitlam Adanaces 14-11 in Richmond on Saturday.

Rocks' top-spot bid wrecked by Dhillon

NANAIMO — Former Shamrock Charn Dhillon played the spoiler and scored with 49 seconds left in overtime Saturday to give Nanaimo Timbermen a 16-15 win over the Irish in the schedule-ending game and ruin Victoria's hopes of a first-place finish in the Western Lacrosse Association.

Victory would have enabled the Shamrocks to take over the top berth from Coquitlam Adanacs, but the cellar-dwelling T-Men were determined to keep the Rocks anchored in the runner-up spot.

Ted Greves scored four goals for Nanaimo while Brian Evans and Dhillon each added three. Singles went to Ken King, Ron McNeil, Pete Rushton, Ron Sage, Ron Brown and Wayne Reede.

League scoring-champion Kevin Alexander led Victoria scorers with seven goals and clubmate Jim Lynch counted twice. Other Irish tallies were notched by Larry Bell, Bill Marachek, Norm Baker, Rick Baker, Jeevan Dillon and Jim Boyd.

Victoria led 5-2 after the first period and 8-7 after the second. The game was tied at 14 at the end of regulation time.

Larry Smeltzer made 46 saves in goal for Victoria while Mac Maude made 34 saves as the Timbermen, with nothing to lose, continually out-hustled the Rocks.

The result means Victoria, which finished two points behind Coquitlam, will face Vancouver Burrards in one best-of-seven semi-final series while the Adanaces go against New Westminster Salmonbellies.

The Victoria-Vancouver series opens Wednesday in Memorial Arena while Coquitlam will have home-floor advantage for its first game against the 'Bellies.

Bottlers lead playoff after overtime victory

Victoria Goodwill Bottlers will travel to New Westminster Saturday to play the Salmonbellies in the second game of the B.C. intermediate "A" lacrosse playoffs.

The defending-champion Bottlers won the opening game last Saturday but required overtime to down the Salmonbellies 16-11 after the teams had played to a 10-10 tie in regulation time at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Frank Wendt scored six times for the Bottlers with Wayne Christiaens getting three goals and Shawn Dheensaw adding six assists. Colin Marshall was top New Westminster scorer with three goals.

If a third game is required, it will be played Aug. 10 at Esquimalt.

Anthony Brandt, reporting in American Heritage magazine that literacy is declining sharply in North America despite a greater need for it than ever before: "What the history of literacy seems to demonstrate is that a highly literate society evolves out of deeply held values, not out of teaching methods, and where such values are missing, literacy will decline no matter what the teaching methods."

All Ernest Volkman wanted to do was interview Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates for the September issue of Penthouse. Halfway through their dinner interview, Parker picked up an apple and casually crushed it to a pulp in one massive hand. Eyeing the stunned Volkman, he said, "You're the first person I've ever met who didn't say anything after I did that." But Volkman says, "Most rational human beings seldom rebuke fellow humans weighing over 230 pounds and standing over 6 feet, 6 inches tall about their table manners."

Dear Abby:

I am 79 years young, and as an avid reader of your column I was sadly disappointed in your response to the gentleman who requested your difinition of "old age." You replied: "To recycle an old cliche, old age, like beauty, lies in the mind of the beholder. But I would say that you reached it when:

"You need your glasses to find your glasses.

"You walk into another room and wonder what you went there for.

"People start telling you you're looking good, but no one says you're good-looking.

"You pass up a romantic encounter because you're worried about your heart.

"You think today's policemen look like kids."

Your characterization of older people as sightless, absentminded, ugly and sexless is unworthy of the insights your readers expect of you.

Eisenhower once said, "I'm saving that rocker for the day I feel as old as I really am." He never used that rocker.

Consider the following as being more apropos as a comment on the condition of aging:

"There is only one thing that old age can give you, and that is wisdom." — S. I. Hayakawa

Claude Pepper

Dear Mr. Pepper:

I beg your forgiveness, and the forgiveness of all others whom I may have offended.

Dear Abby:

I'm a girl, just turned 15. I am allowed to date guys who drive regular cars, but my father won't let me go out with a guy who drives a van. I think that's dumb, but as long as I am living under his roof I have to do what he says and keep my mouth shut, right?

Question

Dear Question:

Right.

Dear Abby:

I am a pushover for young people. Four young employees who work with me have borrowed money from me for "personal emergencies." The smallest amount was $300. Not one of those who owes me has ever mentioned the debt, or made any effort to repay even a part of it. One debt is three years old. (By the way, I didn't ask for any interest on my money, nor did I ask anyone to sign a note.)

All four co-workers are very friendly to me, and none seems embarrassed about his non-payment. I am far from wealthy and could use the cash myself, as I shall be retiring soon. How shall I handle this?

Dear Timid:

Try this: "Look, my young friend, you have owed me $———— for ———— months I've said nothing, hoping you would recognize the importance of keeping your credit good. You will hurt yourself in the future more than you hurt me now if you don't face up the responsibility of paying your honest debts, so how about it?

Once again, the tourists are upon us

This morning it took me eight minutes by my watch to cross the Island Highway that flows between our rural route mailbox and our house. The reason for the delayed traverse was a line of traffic that filled the half-mile straightaway between lower and upper bends without an appreciable break.

Much of this procession consisted of recreation vehicles. There were travel vans and motor homes, truck-mounted campers and cars towing trailers. It all added up to one double-edged fact. For better or worse, we who live at the top of the Strait of Georgia are immersed to our ears in another tourist season.

While I stood by the roadside with our mail clutched in my fist, rigs from half the states in the union and a generous sampling of our Canadian provinces passed.

They come here for a variety of reasons.

Some are attracted by the scenery. We dish them up a sparkling blue many-islanded sea, and green woods rolling to the interior foothills with only lakes and an occasional logging road to punctuate the wilderness.

For a piece de resistance, the Coast Range soars skyward across the the strait, its peaks cutting a fantastic tracery against the sky. Oh yes: we have considerable to offer in the way of scenery!

There are those who come for the fishing. They arrive in awesome numbers. These calm-weather days, with the coho salmon run nearing its peak and the big tyee soon to be homing in on Campbell River, Discovery passage at times presents an all-but-unbelievable spectacle.

Boats plod among the tide-swirls, each with its intent trollers, by the dozen and the hundred. On the favored grounds out by the bell-buoy off Cape Mudge, it's wall-to-wall boats from dawn until late dusk.

I don't know how many of these fishermen catch salmon, at best a moody and capricious fish given to sudden flurries of feeding with long periods of abstinence between bouts. But for each coho or Chinook taken, the provincial economy receives a substantial boost. Many millions of dollars each year goes into boats and motors, tackle and accessories. The tourist season, in fact, bears directly and importantly on our up-Island economy. It keeps out stories frantically busy . . . a fact which those of us who live in these parts approve in theory, but resent while we wait in line to be served after a press of American shoppers.

Parking, for ten months of the year, offers no problems. But through July and August, Campbell River street are crowded. Our Tyee Plaza doubles its car intake. So does our large Ironwood Mall.

Nowhere, however, is the fact of yet another tourist season impressed upon up so dramatically as in the provincial camping parks. We have two in this area: huge Miracle Beach to the south between Campbell River and Courtenay, and smaller Elk Falls near the junction of the Campbell and Quinsam rivers a few miles north.

By evening these days, when the wood-smoke from a myriad campfires sifts like incense among the tall trees, Miracle Beach has acquired a transient population that would do justice to a fair-to-middling town.

With its lanes of numbered campsites nestled shoulder to shoulder, Miracle Beach camping is far from the wilderness variety. But the park is a fine place for adults to relax in, and it is a veritable heaven for the children who swarm in it each summer.

My own feelings about tourist season are nothing if not ambivalent.

I detest the scratchy traffic that too often clogs and slows the speed of the highway to a crawl. It irks me that a panic stop is required of me because the American ahead has spotted one of our resident eagles perched picturesquelty in a tree, and jammed a hoof on his brake pedal.

"Look! Just look up there! It's a sure-enough bald-headed eagle!")

But we like the hustle and bustle, the sense of purpose and busyness that the tourists bring with them. Also, we set store by our contacts with amiable Americans, chance-met them they blunder down our access road, or come in to the resorts with their gear-cluttered boats from an evening of salmon fishing.

Perhaps the best thing about tourist season is that it doesn't last forever.

One day, a month or so from now, in a gentle autumn rain, we'll drive up to Campbell River over a highway no more than normally over-loaded. In the town, we'll note subtle differences. The store clerks won't be so rushed. Parking will be much easier. People on the street will have relaxed into the well-worn old floater coats which are our normal wet-weather wear. They'll have time to stop and chat.

With mixed relief and regret, we'll know that for another year, the tourist season is over!

Summer fun made from discards

These rain-soaked B.C. youngsters appear to be ready for indoor activity

New York Times

We're in the middle of summer vacation. Some of the excitement has worn off. Then comes the rain — children and rain . . .

Movies, museums and libraries hold their attention for a while and small doses of the plug-in drug won't hurt. But there are also more creative and less expensive means to keep youngsters amused — or amusing themselves — for hours.

Two pamphlets published in the United States by the Administration for Children, Youth and Family, a branch of the Department of Health and Human Services, give parents and teachers tips on how household and other usable discards can be made into suitable toys for young children.

Titled Beautiful Junk and Toys: Fun in the Making, the pamphlets explain how, with simple leg work and imagination, old tractor tires can be used as backyard sand boxes, or how children can make a banjo out of a shoebox, rubber bands and a cardboard tube.

"We first printed Beautiful Junk in 1965," said Rossie Kelly, who works in the administration's Headstart bureau. "It's been one of our most popular publications."

It was written to help educators who are unable, for budgetary reasons, to purchase equipment and supplies for a preschool program. Included is a source list for store discards, from scrap paper to old boats, that can be picked up for free or purchased for a nominal amount.

Among the projects described, for example, is how children can make space helmets and rocket ships out of the three-gallon ice cream containers used in ice cream parlors and the large packing crates used by overseas moving companies.

"We also needed a booklet for parents who want to spend more constructive time with their children at home," said Mrs. Kelly. "That's why we published Toys: Fun in the Making. The idea is to show parents and teachers they don't have to buy expensive toys for their children. They can make them instead."

As a guide for simple household crafts, it shows children how to make such toys as turtles out of empty margarine tubs or self-propelled boats from styrofoam and pieces of soap.

Toys: Fun in the Making can also be used by teachers as an educational tool to help children develop basic skills, including the ability to recognize different colors, shapes and sizes of objects. Children learn to coordinate hand and eye movements by making the objects, as well as using fundamental addition and learning new words to express themselves.

Both pamphlets are available by mail from the United States Government Printing Office.

For Beautiful Junk, send $1 (U.S.) to the Superintendent of Documents, United States Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. The stock number is 017-092-00004-9. Although the pamphlet is in its last printing, there are still 30,000 in stock.

For Toys: Fun in the Making, which is free, write to the United States Government Printing Office, Department 76, Washington, D.C. 20401.

Pill-popping is an epidemic problem

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

For the past 20 years my husband has been taking some kind of sleeping pill. Name it and he has taken it. As soon as someone mentions a new one he's off and running to get it. He's only 46 years old. I'm afraid that eventually he'll be in a lot of trouble. Is there any way of getting him to break the habit?

K.W.

Dear K.W.:

The abuse and overuse of sleeping pills and tranquilizing drugs have resulted in an uncontrolled epidemic. Drugs that once were available only by prescription can now be purchased on the black market. Consequently, there can be no control over the amount that any individual takes.

Drug dependence and drug addiction has been the inevitable result. Accidental deaths attributed to these drugs have reached a level that has aroused great concern among physicians and public health officials.

It is estimated that almost 10 billion sleeping pills are consumed each year in North America alone. It is also estimated that more than 25 per cent of all poisonings that require hospitalization are caused by overdoses of sleeping pills, tranquilizers and, particularly, barbiturates.

Many believe that they are the total answer to anxiety, fears, stress and tension. They aren't.

Your husband is in a trap from which he cannot easily extricate himself. Perhaps with guidance and psychological support he might learn to confront his problems directly, solve them and get rid of the albatross.

Dear Doctor:

I've been told that I have a "dropped stomach." I know it isn't serious, but I'd like to know more about it.

L.R.

Dear L.R.:

I'm curious about one thing. When your doctor told you that you had a dropped stomach, didn't you ask him anything about it? If you didn't, you have cheated yourself of some relief from your anxiety. My answer should reinforce your doctor's message, not supplant it.

Sometimes, the stomach or other organ of the body occupy an unusually low position. "Dropped" organs occur most frequently among thin, delicate women who have rather long chests and relatively short abdomens.

The dropped position of the stomach may interfere with the proper emptying of food and with normal digestion. Small quantities of food, taken at frequent intervals, rather than three large meals a day, can relieve some of the symptoms.

Also, check your physician for exercises that can help.

your horoscope

By SYDNEY OMARR
Wednesday, August 6, 1980

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Turn on charm, be diplomatic — then you get your way, especially in dealing with relatives. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Gift received aimed at beautifying and making home a more comfortable place.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Define meanings, see places and people devoid of clouds of self-deception. Hang on to your money! Someone wants something for nothing—and you appear to be "prime target." Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can play "power game." Means astrological and numerical cycles are high—circumstances fall into place. You are at right place at right time. Take lead, initiate action. Priorities come into focus. Money and love dominate scenario. Set pace!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You gain recognition, possible profit from project you thought had been "buried." Apparent setback is transformed into victory. Know it, dispel fears and doubts. Aries, Libra natives play key roles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Call "out of the blue" leads to pleasant encounter. Another Leo and an Aquarian figure in intriguing scenario. Emphasis on creativity, fulfillment of hopes, wishes — and romance. Avoid extravagance. Be independent, original and realize that you are dynamic and very attractive!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Career opportunity follows unusual meeting with business associate. Follow through on hunch. Maintain self-esteem. Don't sell short on your abilities. Bring goals into focus. There could be clear sailing—if you know where you want to go.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Open lines of communication—ask questions, correspond, refuse to be discouraged by apparent distance or language barriers. Accent on increased social activity, travel, education and publishing project. Humor, versatility are twin allies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Dig beneath superficial layers—you can find answers which lead to "pot of gold." Taurus, Aquarius and another Scorpio figure prominently. Check sources — be aware of fine print. Build on solid structure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Go slow, avoid legal commitments — satisfy curiosity, unload a barrage of questions. But do not give away your hand — play cards close to chest. Delineate knowledge, define terms. You learn where you stand in many areas, including romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Study Sagittarius message; you get needed material — and encouragement. Emphasis on service, "dependable products," pets, ability to join forces with one who shares your basic concerns. The number 6 figures prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Romance, clandestine "arrangements" could be featured. Pisces, Virgo persons play key roles. Heart will rule your head-know it and put some controls on impulse. Define terms, discern motives — and protect self in emotional clinches.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Get business affairs in order—emphasize completion, final transaction, reaching agreement with older individual who is knowledgeable concerning property values. Capricorn, Cancer natives play significant roles.

IF AUGUST 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you have keen appreciation for the arts, luxury—you are loyal, stubborn, affectionate and have a "melodious" voice. You tend to have a "sweet tooth" and must take care in connection with blood-sugar levels. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. December could be your most significant month of 1980, a year highlighting creative freedom, relevant changes, gain via written word, travel — and, if single, marriage. If married, there could be an addition to family. Married or single, you take a stand and roadblocks to success are swept away.

A break through in heating efficiency

For those who have a masonry fireplace and know it sends most of the heat up the chimney, Fresh Air Fireplaces has the solution the Renaissance Circulation System Converter. It will transform your present masonry fireplace into an efficient, economical heat source. Available in a variety of sizes, it is easily installed in the firebox of most existing fireplaces.

Its operation is simple and unique — a controlled air intake at the bottom of the unit allows fresh air to enter the hollow bottom base, where it is heated, expands and rises in tubes that direct the heat into your home, not up the chimney.

The attractive glass doors serve two purposes: they eliminate most smoke, soot and sparks from entering your home and they prevent heated room air from escaping up the chimney.

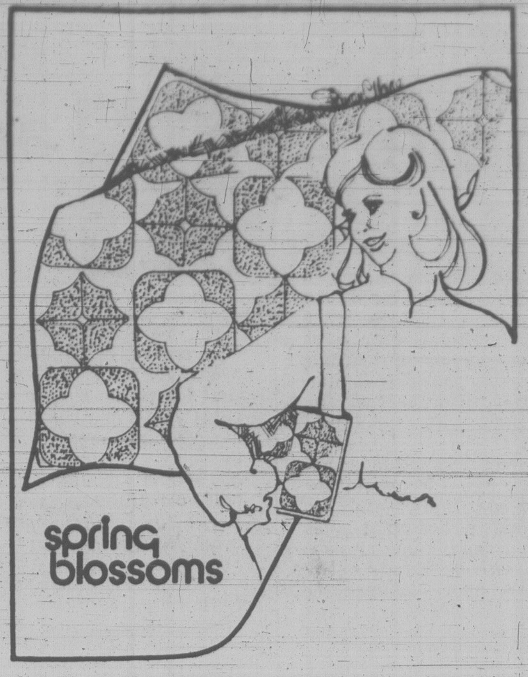
Spring blossom design

Spring Blossoms — means use any color your garden can offer to make into this versatile design by Karen Fleming of Sioux St. Marie, Ont. Are you into Stained Glass technique (in fabrics, that is?) This is the method where you cut shapes out of usually solid colors of broadcloth and then place them side by side (not overlapping) onto a background of light fabric. You then cover the touching edges with bias tape - usually black or grey. Once everything is sewn in place, the hanging may be hung in the light — in a window for example, and the colors resemble a stained glass window — beautiful.

This Spring Blossoms design may also be made using simple applique techniques. For Block A, use pink appliques on white. For Block B, use white appliques on pink. Or, use a simple piecing method and make lots of one template and alternate their position. Designs like this one are fun to figure out the many ways to make them. That is the secret of a good design. This one may be accomplished with the Drunkard's Path method of piecing. It may also be made by sewing dozens of the same applique shapes onto a large background sheet traced with a grid. The new water erasable pens are a boon for this method!



Use one color on white, or cream, or use lots of garden colors. Use plains, or as many prints as your sewing basket can provide. Have a swapping party and trade prints with your quilting friends.

This is a pattern you will want to make more than once, more than one way. It's challenging in it's variety. Four blocks will make a purse front . . . or a pillow. A few more will make a striking wall-hanging. Use your imagination and the Spring Blossoms directions — for applique, machine applique, the applique alternative, stained glass, or a simple quilting stitch design. It's unlimited!

Patterns Available: No. 691: Spring Blossoms, by Karen Fleming. $3.20.

Pak 72: 35 different quilting stitch DESIGNS — for blocks, borders and central motifs. Instructions included. 3 large sheets of paper. $3.00.

Chacopa Pen — water erasable, felt-tipped. For tracing designs directly onto fabric . . . dap with cold water — they disappear. $3.20

How To Order: Send your name, address and postal code, along with a cheque or mo. to Hearthside Patterns, c/o Victoria Times, P.O. Box 9120, Stn.E., Edmonton, Alta. T5P 4K2.

Be cautious — buy quality

looking great

By RENA PAUL

Dear Rena:

The summer sales are in full swing. Can you suggest any items which would be good investments for next summer?

Investor

Dear Investor:

We have seen a big splash of colour this year to mark the beginning of the 80's. It will continue into the next seasons and likely next summer. However let us be cautious and buy high quality, well made, somewhat conservative items on sale. Look for silk, pure cotton and fine wools as they are your best investments and will survive trands and changes.

Dear Rena:

I spend a lot of time lying in the sun and I enjoy getting a deep dark tan. However, I do not tan evenly and my nose is the first to go! My burned and peeling nose ruins my entire effort! Help!

Burned-Out

Dear Burned-Out:

There is a wide range of sun screens and sun blocks which are useful. However, for complete protection, I suggest you use zinc oxide ointment on your nose after it is tanned so that the rest of your face can catch up. You will have an even tan for all your effort. I may caution anyone who lies in the sun to cover the eyelid area with a damp folded cloth or an eye shade to protect this thin and highly sensitive area from burn and possible eye damage.

Dear Rena:

Although I'm only twenty-two years old, I have very visible lines and squint wrinkles around my eyes and forehead, that seem accented by my tan. What can be done?

Worried

Dear Worried:

Some people are much more sensitive to light than others. Therefore you must always protect yourself by wearing dark glasses in the sun and sun hats in summer. Also, it may well be a good idea to consciously relax your facial muscles to reduce the contorted line areas. Use an eye cream and a moisturizer to help the skin remain subtle and save your lines for theatre.

Dear Rena:

I am only a twelve-year-old boy, but I hope you will read my letter. I don't tan. I just burn. So, my mother makes me wear a wide-brimmed straw hat whenever I go out. It's not a bad hat, I quite like it. But I think it looks silly on a hazy day when I'm sure there is no chance of getting a burn. What do you say? Please answer in your column. So my mother will see it.

Thank you.

Adam S.

Dear Adam:

Wearing a hat all the time may be a nuisance, but you'll find that most farmers, fishermen and other outdoor folks do it. Personally I think a hat looks rather manly and handsome as well as fashionably sensible.

Hazy days can be tricky. Sometimes the haze prevents the ultraviolet rays from reaching the earth. At other times droplets of water in the clouds reflect the sunlight so that it can damage skin as much as on clear days. Don't take any chances. Wear your hat and have a happy summer.

Please send your questions to Rena Paul c/o the Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N1. All queries will be answered confidentially; if stamped, self-addressed envelope is included.

common cents

by kate macqueen

To save money on prescription sun glasses, you can have old but up-to-date lenses tinted. A color coating is applied and lasts for years. Plastic lenses are dyed and the color lasts the life of the lenses. It's a less expensive way to have an extra pair of glasses for fishing, gardening, etc.

Water or milk is best for cooking beaten eggs? For lighter omelets, use water which evaporates in cooking and helps eggs to rise to a lighter, fluffier texture. For scrambled eggs, you need the fat in milk or cream to add moisture and tenderness.

Petunias, marigolds, zinnias and early chysanthemums now in full bloom at the Floralies Internationales

Floralies a mosaic of living color

elizabeth forbes

"A mosaic of living color!"

Those words come easily when you visit the Floralies Internationales outdoor display at Montreal, as I did in mid-July.

Combined with an indoor Floralies during the month of May, this is the first exhibition ever held in North America, where the great horticultural traditions of the main continents have been united in a single presentation.

The outdoor site on Ile Notre-Dame was originally created, with its ornamental lakes and canals, for Expo 67.

Until the mid-70s it formed a part of Man and His World. Then, with deterioration of a number of the pavilions that project was gradually phased out and the site was more or less neglected.

Chosen for the 1980 outdoor Floralies, it now features 44 different displays of flowers, trees and ornamental shrubs, bulbs, evergreens, annuals and perennials, rose bushes, fruit trees and vegetables.

There are horticultural landscapes and flower beds, educational and scientific exhibits, children's and community gardens.

Some nations are presenting entertainment programs with their displays, others are staging conferences and meetings relating to the general theme of Floralies.

Concerts, theatre and fine arts exhibitions have also been mounted and there are a number of excellent restaurants, snack bars and garden cafes.

Participating countries include Austria, Belgium, Canada, Czechoslovakia, France, Holland, Italy, Mexico, Peru, Portugal, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Four provinces — Quebec, Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia — have displays and there are many interesting presentations from cities, towns, districts and villages in the province of Quebec.

To achieve this tremendous effect, five of the original Expo 67 pavilions were demolished — Greece, Israel, Trinidad-Tobago, the Atlantic provinces and a theme pavilion.

Seven others have been totally or partially restored — France, Great Britain, Quebec, Jamaica and the Christian, United Nations and Indians of Canada pavilions.

When the exhibition closes, on the first day of September, the whole area will be declared a floral park and will be maintained from then on by the City of Montreal.

During my few hours at Floralies, I was whisked about in a two-seat electric cart by a young horticulture student named Lucie, one of many exhibition guides.

Canada's exhibit, featuring our national landscape, from sea to sea, includes a meadow with all kinds of wild flowers; a peat bog with skeleton trees, surrounded by acquatic plants and water lilies to give some color; rock formations where you see lichens in various stages of growth and a polygonal garden of grass and moss.

Highlight is an alpine garden with waterfalls, in a setting of rare conifers, moraine and grass.

Quebec, as the host province, has a display in the heart of the exhibition, jutting out into one of the ornamental lakes.

Created by members of the Montreal Botanical Gardens, in co-operation with the provincial department of agriculture and the city of Montreal, its major point of interest is a replica of a habitant home of yesteryear, in a grove of maple trees.

There is also a series of rock gardens, displays of sun, mountain, woodland and acquatic plants, sand and clay ground trees and delicate ferns.

This exhibit is surrounded by multi-colored iris, theme flower of Floralies 1980.

France, awarded grand prize of honor for best international entry in the outdoor exhibition, has used thousands of flowers in its presentation — chrysanthemums, lilies, marigolds, pinks and roses.

The United Kingdom, third in the international category after Italy, has seven theme areas fanning out from a centrepiece named Queen Mother's Rose Garden, a tribute to Her Majesty in her 80th birthday year.

Roses, as you will guess, are very much in evidence, but there is also an herb garden and a mixed hedge of plants that attract bees and butterflies.

Theme chosen by the United States is improving quality of life in an urban environment and all plants, shrubs, trees, ferns and flowers used have, in common, a great tolerance for tough urban conditions.

There are masses of perennials and a recreational area for children where the horticultural products are of a more resistant quality.

Grand prize of honor for national participation went to Ontario.

Dominant feature is the province logo made of living plants and colored stones, surrounded by annuals of all kinds. There is also an arboretum of southern Ontario trees and shrubs.

Design and work for this site was undertaken by students at the Niagara Parks Commission School of Horticulture, in co-operation with the province's ministry of agriculture and food.

British Columbia's display includes a loggia created from the trunks of cedar trees and a series of gardens arranged around a Thunderbird totem.

There are grassy slopes and displays of shrubs and trees native to this province as well as some from other countries that have been successfully transplanted over the years and that now thrive in British Columbia soil.

Postscript: Twenty-one countries had exhibits at the indoor Floralies, held in the month of May.

For that event Montreal's Olympic Veledrome was transformed into a valley of flowers by horticulturists from around the world.

Displays included cut flowers, flowering plants, tropical and sub-tropical plants, ornamental trees and shrubs, cacti, bonsai, presentations of floral art, dried flowers and original floral arrangements.

Fox run sparks funding fears

TORONTO (CP) — A Canadian Cancer Society spokesman says people leery of contributing to unofficial fund-raisers inspired by Terry Fox's cross-Canada run should mail contributions to local cancer society offices.

Kay Dabor of Mississauga, Ont., said Monday she has heard of several complaints about door-to-door canvassers soliciting money.

"The cancer society is not doing an official door-to-door canvass in connection with Terry Fox's run but we are aware of many unofficial fund-raisers inspired by Terry's efforts."

Mrs. Dabor said the society realizes that the fervor inspired by Terry Fox could bring out some "rip-off artists."

Meanwhile, more than 500 people gathered Monday in Sudbury, Ont., to welcome Fox, 22, who now is more than half way in his run from St. John's, Nfld., to Vancouver.

Fox said that cancer had caused his right leg to be amputated three years ago following lengthy chemotherapy and that he decided to run across the country to bring attention to the efforts of the cancer society.

Starting his run last spring, Fox has raised pledges of more than $1.2 million so far.

"If you read in the papers that Terry Fox is tired, he's down and he's out, don't you dare believe it," he said. "I'm not going to quit."

Sometime on Sunday he passed the half-way point of his run without knowing it.

"Mentally, today (Monday) was the hardest so far. Because I've been looking for the halfway mark for 3½ months, then I missed it. Every morning I get up thinking about that half-way point. When you are running every day those things are important."

Fox left early today for Espanola, about 60 kilometres southwest of Sudbury. He's expected to arrive there on Wednesday.

10% yearly inflation forecast for Canada

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Canadians can expect an annual inflation rate of at least 10 per cent a year over the next two years, three members of the House of Commons finance committee said Monday.

The three MPs, all from Toronto and representing different parties, spoke at the final question-and-answer session of the Couchiching Conference on inflation at Geneva Park, 16 kilometres northeast of here.

James Peterson (Liberal-Willowdale), Michael Wilson (Progressive Conservative-Etobicoke Centre) and Robert Rae (NDP-Broadview-Greenwood) put forward varying approaches to combatting inflation but all said it is unrealistic to expect consumer prices to rise by less than 10 per cent a year within two years.

The tone of the five-day conference, conducted by the Toronto-based Couchiching Institute on Public Affairs, was deeply pessimistic about inflation and members of the audience said Monday they heard little or nothing to encourage them.

Economist Ian Macdonald, president of York University in Toronto and moderator of an earlier conference session, said in an interview, "there should be no reason for anyone to go away from hre thinking any other than that inflation is going to continue and will increase."

Eric Koch of Toronto, chairman of the conference and an author and retired broadcaster, said, "we are living in an inflationary environment and I cannot see any way in which that environment will change in the near future."

Of the politicians' remarks, he said, "I think they are well-meaning but just as puzzled as anybody else."

Peterson, vice-chairman of the House finance committee, said inflation must be fought by increasing production by industry, expansion toward world markets and a restructuring of federal-provincial fiscal arrangements.

He said increasing productivity together with research and development will mean "money coming out of the pockets of people in this country" for future investment and that public co-operation will be essential.

Wilson, former minister of state for international trade, said tight control of the money supply is the core of the Conservatives' approach to cutting inflation.

He said this must be combined with limitation in government spending, higher energy taxes and a greater reliance on the private sector to provide initiatives.

Wilson took issue with Peterson's statement that encouraging Canadian ownership of industries would help reduce inflation by keeping resources of capital, technology and managerial expertise within national borders.

"I would like to see greater Canadian ownership but it will not make a bit of difference to inflation," Wilson said, adding Canada can make use of technology developed by foreign-based multinationals.

Rae said he would support greater Canadian ownership of industry if companies would commit themselves to increasing producivity and research, but too often domestic ownership results in "lazy, tariff-protected comlanies" and a reduction in price competition.

"Throwing buzz-words at the problem (of inflation) does not solve it," Rae said.

Tight monetary policies have not succeeded in reducing inflation for the last five years, Rae said, adding selective price controls should be imposed while the government works toward a consensus on monetary and incomes policies.

All three men rejected a suggestion by a questioner that parties might take a co-operative or coalition approach to solving inflation, saying parties' fundamental policy differences are too great.

OTTAWA (CP.) — Dr. Gurdial Singh Dhillon, former speaker of the Indian Parliament and former minister of shipping and transport, has been appointed Indian High Commissioner to Canada.

Reserves revamped

MONTREAL (CP) — A plan to completely reorganize Canada's military reserves will be ready in several months, Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne said Monday.

Lamontagne, attending a meeting of the Interallied Confederation of Reserve Officers, a group which brings together reserve officers from 12 of the 15 NATO countries, said the reorganization is a priority now that modernization and re-equipment of the armed forces is well under way.

He added that another group, including representatives of national defence and transport departments, is revising civil defence policy.

CLASSES IN INTERIOR DECORATING
Afternoon or Evening Sessions
by JOSEPH EGOYAN

Once again the fascinating study of interior decorating will be introduced to you by theoretical and practical analysis. These lectures will be held in the store and also supplemented by on-location studies in selected homes including a visit to the residence of Mr. Egoyan to discuss the problems arising in furniture arrangement, color schemes, lighting, styles, theme, drapery and carpet selection and proper use of pictures and accessories.
Mr. Joseph Egoyan, B.A.ED., your instructor, is well qualified with extensive theoretical and practical knowledge. He is a graduate from the Art Institute of Chicago and California College of Arts and Crafts, has taught at Oakland Tech. High, Calif., the American College in Cairo and the Evening Adult Education program in Victoria. In addition he has a wealth of practical experience in retail fields as proprietor of Ego Arts Gallery in Cairo for five years and Ego Interiors in Victoria for eighteen years. Mr. Egoyan is a qualified artist and has exhibited his art works in a number of one-man shows in the U.A.R. and U.S.A. He won first prize in Vancouver Island Jury Show at the Art Gallery of Victoria, also a one-man show at the Provincial Museum — and, also at the Burnaby Art Gallery. Egoyan's recent watercolors are now showing at Ego Interiors. For the past fifteen years, this course in interior decorating has been given by Mr. Egoyan twice yearly in three separate groups each week. At an average of twenty students in each group, more than a thousand students have taken the course to date.

THE LECTURES WILL BE HELD TUESDAY AFTERNOONS, FROM 1 TO 2:30 P.M. AND ALSO EVENINGS ON MONDAY OR WEDNESDAY 7:30 TO 9 P.M.

CLASSES START SEPTEMBER 22nd, 23rd, 24th at EGO INTERIORS. TOTAL COST OF FIVE LECTURES, ONE A WEEK, $30.00.

Ottawa miffed at silent partner role

QUEBEC (CP) — The federal government is miffed because it says Quebec is taking all the credit for municipal programs that Ottawa helps to fund.

Federal Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet warned the Quebec government Monday that if Quebec does not publicize that $103 million in municipal grants comes from Ottawa, he would reconsider making them.

Ouellet made the statement to Richard Guay, parliamentary assistant to Quebec Municipal Affairs Minister Guy Tardif, as he handed the Quebec department a $3.6 million instalment on the program.

Guay replied that it wasn't Quebec's intention to exclude Ottawa, "and if it happened, it wasn't because of bad faith on our part.

"There's no reason to make a scene." But he promised to look into the complaints.

The grants are for projects worth a total $125.5 million undertaken in 1979 and 1980, such as urban parks, water mains and municipal equipment. Ouellet said the three-year program was one of the last created by the now-defunct federal urban affairs department.

Ouellet added, however, that the municipalities would not suffer if Ottawa decided to refuse to participate in joint programs.

Ouellet gave journalists a similar complaint from Paul Cosgrove, the minister responsible for the Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corp.

But Guay distributed to reporters copies of letters sent to municipalities showing the percentages paid by each government in the program, and recalled that the programs had been announced at joint news conferences with federal representatives.

T"There may have been problems with the news releases though," he acknowledged, alluding to reports in Montreal dailies that gave the impression the grants came only from Quebec City, which in fact is paying only one-quarter of the program.

At a news conference earlier Monday in Ottawa, Ouellet said Quebec was not giving Ottawa credit "because the Quebec government is a separatist government that does not want to show Quebecers that the federal systems work properly."

Mexican envoy makes a splash

ALMONTE, Ont. (CP) — Mexico's ambassador to Canada made a big splash at the opening of this eastern Ontario town's centennial celebrations at the weekend.

The horse-drawn carriage taking ambassador Augustin Barrios Gomez to the ceremonies Saturday broke at the top of a hill, unceremoniously rolled backwards and dumped the ambassador, his wife and four other persons into a ditch filled with more than half a metre of water.

No one was seriously injured in the incident.

"My pride is hurt most of all," said driver Robert McLenaghan.

"It's a miracle no one was badly hurt but were they ever soaked."

After being treated for minor injuries at Almonte General Hospital, Gomez was given a change of clothes by a local councillor and went on to complete his duties at the ceremonies.

Oiled bear better

WINNIPEG (CP) — A female polar bear, left near death from an oil bath experiment last winter, has made a total recovery at the Assiniboine Park Zoo.

The bear was one of three immersed in oil to test their chances of survival in an oil spill. Two of the bears died and the third, barely alive, was sent here.

Clive Roots, zoo director, said the bear is out of danger, in good condition, and eating normally.

Gaz Mizer warranty buster

TORONTO (CP) — Motorists who install a device that is supposed to reduce gasoline consumption by 25 per cent risk invalidating their car warranties, say spokesmen for Canadian automobile manufacturers.

Douglas Mepham of Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. said in a recent interview that installation of the device, called a Gaz Mizer, invalidates the warranty because "all the (car) engineering has gone out the window."

Advertising for the device, which sells for about $60, say it reduces fuel use, increases engine performance, reduces emissions and cools the motor.

Mepham said he could foresee circumstances where the warranty would be retained if vehicles with the device were inspected by Ford mechanics. But pell-mell installation is not covered.

Spokesmen for Chrysler Canada Ltd. and General Motors of Canada Ltd. also said addition of a Gaz Mizer would render their warranties invalid.

Roger Dupuis, vice-president of Gaz Mizer in Canada, which opened an office in Moncton, N.B., about three months ago, said anyone who puts one of the devices on his car does so at his own risk.

The device is inserted into the PCV (positive crankcase ventilation) line and sucks air into a container holding a mixture of water and alcohol.

Canada seeking deal with Toyota

TOKYO (AP) — Canadian Industry Minister Herb Gray today called on executives of Toyota Motor Co. to ask Japan's largest auto-maker to consider investing in North America, a Canadian embassy spokesman said.

Gray will meet with Toyota chairman Masaya Hanai and company president Eiji Toyoda.

"He is taking the occasion to explain the Canadian auto industry and our particular setup in the North American context," the embassy spokesman said.

In recent months pressure has been mounting on Japan to establish factories in the U.S.

WIN A summerfunthing

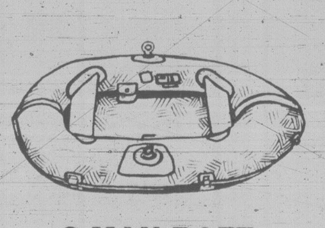
Play it daily and be eligible to win weekly prizes. It's easy and it's fun — just follow the instructions below . . .

THIS WEEK'S PRIZES

1st

STEREO RADIO CASSETTE RECORDER

2nd



3-MAN RAFT WITH OARS AND PUMP

3rd

PICNIC SET (Cooler & Jug)
4 sets to be won

HOW TO PLAY

Locked inside the "SUMMERFUNTHING" safe are many valuable prizes. Some of those prizes could be yours if you find the correct PASSWORD that opens the combination lock. It's an exciting game that's fun and easy to enter. The instructions on the dial give you the position of the letters in the "SUMMERFUNTHING" PASSWORD. All you have to do is find the first letter to start. For instance, suppose you started at the letter E and the instructions read 2nd LETTER-FOUR COUNTER CLOCKWISE. Count four spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter E and you arrive at the letter A. The next instruction reads 3rd LETTER-EIGHT COUNTER CLOCKWISE, so count off eight spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter A and you arrive at the letter S. Finally the 4th letter, SIX CLOCKWISE means you count in a clockwise direction from the letter S and you arrive at the letter Y. In this example the PASSWORD is the word E-A-S-Y. To give you another clue and to add to the interest, each day's password is scrambled and you will find it at the bottom of the illustration.

GAME RULES

1. Winners will be chosen by random drawing from all valid entries. All winners must answer a skill testing question.
2. Winners from the previous week will be published in the Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist.
3. It is not necessary for contestants to buy the Colonist or Times to enter the SUMMERFUNTHING contest. An exact drawing of the entry form printed in the Colonist or Times may be made on a plain piece of paper. Note: copies produced by any other process will not be accepted.
4. The SUMMERFUNTHING judges will have the final decision on any interpretation of Game rules.
5. As a condition of receiving prizes, recipients agree to allow publication of their names and pictures in the Colonist or Times for no additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all rules. No prize substitutions.
6. The contest is open to all readers of the Daily Colonist and Victoria Times on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands. Employees of Victoria Press and their immediate families are not eligible to enter.
7. In fairness to all, the Colonist or Times cannot answer questions or respond to phone calls or letters regarding THE SUMMERFUNTHING CONTEST.
8. All winners will be determined by a random draw from all valid entries.

HOW TO ENTER

Complete the puzzle and fill in the "PASSWORD" on the entry form. Clip out the entry form and send it to us in an envelope with the puzzle number printed in the top left hand corner of the envelope. (As illustrated.)

Be sure to include your name, address and phone number on the entry form.

Enter as many times as you wish but make sure each entry is in a separate envelope.

Mail your entries to:

No progress in actors' row

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The principal players in Hollywood's biggest drama in 20 years — a strike by about 67,000 actors — resumed negotiations for three hours Monday before the talks were recessed without progress. No new bargaining sessions are planned.

The industry executives' meeting with the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists was the first in 12 days.

Meanwhile, unemployment lines have swelled as the $40 million-a-week TV-film industry entered its third idle week.

"No progress," local Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service commissioner Phyllis Cayse said in describing Monday's meeting which ended shortly after 6 p.m. She added that, although there are no plans for a resumption of the talks, the two parties are subject to federal mediators' call for another session.

Ms. Cayse recently cautioned that the service cannot force a resolution of the strike, which has virtually shut down the $1.5-billion film and television industry for the first time since actors went on strike in 1960.

Even though the strike began to bite heavily into the pocketbooks of industry workers — from producers to actors down to set dressers — one actors union spokesman foresaw little possibility for a quick settlement of the contract stalemate.

"The conference requested by the Federal Mediation (and Conciliation) Service has been recessed with no action," said union spokesman Kim Fellner. "Management set resolution of the pay TV issue as precondition to further talks. They refused to discuss any of the other contract issues."

The dispute between producers, the actors' guild and the artists federation for a new three-year contract revolves around actors' demands for payments in the burgeoning home video market.

Since the strike began July 21, area unemployment offices have reported dramatic increases in the number of new claims, many of which are from industry workers laid off because of the strike.

Jim Heaney, manager of the state Employment Development Dept. office in North Hollywood, said new claims increased to 1,100 a week when the strike began from a normal 550 a week.

Concert-goers applaud triple play

Strings dominated the Sunday chamber music concert of the Victoria International Festival, bringing some too-seldom heard music to the attention of the audience.

Such was the David Popper Requiem for three cellos and piano, Bruch's moving Kohl Nidrei and a suite for viola and piano by Ernst Bloch.

The first two works were presented as tributes to Gerda Klein, a faithful supporter of the festival who died in a highway accident last month.

The three cello voices with subtle piano interpolations belonged to students of the Johannesen International School of the Arts and were a testimony to the fine artist tradition of the students attending this school.

Popper's music — the composer was himself a cellist — uses the three baritone instruments to produce a weaving of softly colored strands in a poignant yet serenely lovely tapestry. The four gifted performers were Barry Gold, Gabin Linale and Martin Hornstein, cellos, and David Korevaaf, piano.

The Karr-Lewis Duo, world renowned for its unique combination of double bass with harpsichord, presented a major group, using the piano as keyboard instrument throughout, possibly because a top quality harpsichord is not available.

The Kohl Nidrei variations were dedicated by Gary Karr to the memory of Gerda Klein and superbly played, the bass's splendid range and quality of tone color used with the Karr artistry, the nimbleness of fingering and bow that makes the instrument sound at times like a whole choir of strings.

A Bach Arioso and one of Bottesini's colorful compositions (with Karr giving reign to his sense of comedy) completed the group.

Eberhard Klemmstein with pianist John Ogdon, producing a full, vibrant tone and exploring the music's intricacies studiously, played Bloch's lengthy Suite for Viola and Piano.

Crowning the program was the Brahms Piano Trio in B Major for which Ogdon once more joined Jean-Jacques Kantorow and Philippe Muller in a performance that glowed with the brilliance and musical passion that has characterized the several performances of these three artists, both in solo and combination.

Monday's concert was highlighted by flautist Robert Aitken and violinist Kantorow, performing with their anticipated fluent artistry as well as conducting the Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra in Telemann's Flute Suite in A minor and the Bach Violin Concerto in E Major.

Derry Deane, the Symphony's concert master, with William Shookhoff as solo pianist as well as conductor, performed Mendelssohn's Double Concerto for Violin and Piano, bringing off the triple play with considerable skill.

Jet-slinging carrier star

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The star of Hollywood's newest war movie could outgun, upstage and overshadow the best of Clint Eastwood, Audie Murphy and John Wayne — all without uttering a word.

This modern day fighter turned box office attraction is a jet-slinger — the USS Nimitz, the world's largest aircraft carrier.

It has the lead role in the movie, The Final Countdown, which premieres in Washington Sunday. Producers expect it to be a financial bonanza.

"This could be the greatest Navy recruiting movie ever," said Cmdr. Emory Brown, whose jet fighter squadron is based in Virginia Beach and played a supporting role in the $12 million production released by United Artists.

In the movie, Kirk Douglas portrays the skipper of the 1,092-foot ship that vanishes in the Pacific on Dec. 7, 1980, and reappears off Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, just as the Japanese attack.

F-14 jet fighters take off from the Nimitz, with real Navy pilots behind the controls, and buzz Japanese planes as cameramen capture it all on film.

The idea for the movie came from Douglas' son, producer Peter Douglas, who last year persuaded the Navy to allow the nuclear carrier, and many of its 5,000 crewmen, to be in the film.

Opening lead — four of hearts.

Bridge does not lend itself to hard and fast rules. There are of course general principles that govern most situations — whether in the bidding or the play — but these principles must yield to logic when it is clear that adhering blindly to a general principle is apt to prove injurious.

Take this case where West led a heart against three notrump, dummy playing the ten, East the queen and South the ace. Declarer returned the jack of diamonds, which held, and then a diamond to the ten, East winning the trick with the king.

East returned the queen of clubs, won by declarer with the king, and South played a low heart towards dummy's J-2. West was now helpless and South made nine tricks consisting of a spade, two hearts, four diamonds and two clubs.

Declarer would have gone down at least two had East played the five of hearts at trick one instead of the queen. True, ducking dummy's ten would have violated the rule of third-hand-high, but there was more than ample reason to do so under the circumstances.

It was a virtual certainty that West did not have the A-K of hearts, and it followed from this that playing the queen would enable declarer to get to dummy later on, whether he had the ace, the king, or both.

On the other side of the coin was the strong possibility that, by playing low on the opening lead, East might deprive declarer of a vital entry to dummy to cash the diamonds.

In the actual case, this possibility would have matured and South would have found himself in a hopeless predicament.

21 HELP WANTED GENERAL

RETIRED
BORED?

You probably need the responsibility of a part-time job, close to home, where many people rely on you. The responsibility won't be more than a couple of hours daily.
Colonist routes easily delivered by walking with a cart, by bicycle or car do come available from time to time.
Reliable people of all ages, both sexes, are active each day in delivering Colonist routes.
There is much more to a Colonist route than delivering the world news to the subscriber's doorstep. Consider the following:
(1.) Additional income (from $80 to $300 per month depending on route size).
(2.) Meeting people.
(3.) Early morning fresh air.
(4.) Healthy exercise.
(5.) Knowing your services are needed and people are relying on you.
(6.) Record-keeping (minimal).
(7.) The accomplishment of giving an important service but retaining ample free time for other activities.
There are routes of all sizes and some apartment routes in all areas of the city. Please phone 383-4111 and ask for City Circulation. Leave your name, address and phone number and you will be contacted.

RATTENBURY
$425,000

Iron gates and winding drive lead through nearly an acre of meticulous mature grounds to one of Victoria's finest homes. Built in 1928 by Victoria's legendary architect, Frances Rattenbury, this impressive and exceptionally well planned residence embodies the utmost in gracious living, and full facilities for lavish entertaining. The entrance foyer with cloakroom lead to a 27 ft. grand entrance hall, which in turn opens onto all main rooms. The living room is 38 ft. by 18 ft. with exquisite views. The dining room is 18x14 with adjoining conservatory and stainless steel butlers pantry. There is also a separate office/sunroom plus a panelled den with fireplace and wet bar. The kitchen is crisp and modern with built in oven and Jenn-Air range and a sunny breakfast room. Upstairs are 5 bedrooms, all ensuite, including a spectacular master suite with fireplace, balcony and large dressing room. Behind the double garage is an added bonus, a completely separate and self-contained suite for staff, inlaws, or whatever. Rarely does a property of this calibre become available. PENINSULA CONTEMPORARY $169,000

Located on a high bright acre adjoining the park — this is a total departure from the ordinary: vaulted ceilings, white walls, chocolate carpeting, 3 fireplaces (one is in the master bedroom), almond tone kitchen, a huge multi-level deck spanning the entire southern exposure. The "zoned" floor plan flows beautifully providing "separate togetherness" for a family of any age. Smashing!

308 CARDS OF THANKS

THE GRATITUDE IN MY heart can never be fully expressed, but I want my friends, relatives and neighbors to know how much their kind words and expressions of sympathy have meant to me during my recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of my dear husband Robert (Bob) Botting. I would also like to thank Drs. and staff of Emergency, the ICU and 4th south of the Royal Jubilee Hospital.
Jessie Botting.

309 IN MEMORIAM

GOLDER — In loving memory of my dear sister, Mrs. Mabel Scott Golder, who passed away August 5, 1979.

Softly the leaves of Memory fall,
Gently we gather and treasure them all.
Unseen, unheard, you're always near.
So loved, so missed, so very dear.

—Your loving sister, Mrs. C. B. Baxter (Ellen).

STOREY — In memory of our Uncle Arch who passed away August 4th.
—Bob, Diane and family.

STOREY-In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Archibald Storey, who passed away August 4, 1974.

Sad and sudden was the call
So dearly loved by one and all
His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away.

Sadly missed by his wife Laura, daughters Evelyn and Mary, son Ralph and their families.

TOWNSEND: IN LOVING memory of Ernest our beloved father and grandfather who passed away August 4th, 1979.
"We never lose the ones we love for even though they're gone, within the hearts of those who care their memory lingers on."
Sadly missed by Gail, Owen, David, Michael and Stephen.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his names sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

World oil demand falls dramatically

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The fall-off in oil demand is so sharp that industry observers say even a cut in Saudi Arabia oil production might not be enough to revive market prices dramatically, according to Petroleum Intelligence Weekly.

The widely-followed newsletter said, however, any production cut by the Saudis would have a big psycholgical impact on buyers.

In normal times, the autumn demand upsurge would bolster prices as refiners prepare to meet winter oil needs, the weekly said in its today's edition.

"But today, refiners say inventories are so high that any small demand upswing this coming season could be handled solely by drawing down stocks," the newsletter said.

It said it would take an unusually severe and early winter weather streak to prop up demand appreciably before year end and many refiners now expect to carry surplus inventories, particularly gasoline, right through to next spring.

"Short of a politically inspired OPEC production cutback or some other major supply disruption, the 'temporary' crude oil surplus isn't likely to disappear this year," the weekly said.

The newsletter said the slide of spot market prices, however, could provide a framework conducive to OPEC price reunification, particularly if Saudi Arabia chooses to cut daily production.

OPEC members agreed to a $32.00-a-barrel ceiling at its last price meeting but the weekly said present Mideast spot crude prices are roughly $33.00 a barrel.

The newsletter said the rapid rise of oil prices over the last year has dampened demand far below earlier expectations and demand projections of analysts in the industry are being scrapped.

However, many OPEC producers are still taking a tough pricing stance. The weekly said one producer recently warned a "shortage in the 1980s is inevitable, despite the present surplus."

Minister questioned in shooting

SALISBURY (AP) — A black Zimbabwe cabinet minister has been questioned by police in the shooting death of a white farmer today, government sources said.

Manpower Minister Edgar Tekere was found by police in a raid on an apartment block in central Salisbury after the farmer was shot dead on a farm 35 kilometres southwest of here, the sources said.

Tekere also is secretary-general of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's ruling Zimbabwe African National Union.

Tekere, 43, son of an Anglican priest, has been the centre of controversy in the last two months for publicly calling for the expulsion from the country of two white heads of that church.

A newspaper identified the white victim as 60-year-old William Adams.

Soviet youths win reprieve

CHICAGO (UPI) — Two Soviet youngsters hugged each other and smiled at a judge's announcement they had won another court battle in their fight against being returned to their parents — and Russia.

Walter Polovchak, 12, and his sister, Natalie, 17, were delighted with Monday's ruling extending an order making them wards of the state, their attorney said.

"The children are very happy they don't have to go back," Julian Kulas said. "They are in no immediate danger of being sent back to the Soviet Ukraine."

Cook County Juvenile Court Judge Joseph P. Mooney, following a two-day hearing, ruled the children would not be returned to their parents' custody, at least temporarily, and set another hearing in the case for Sept. 9.

But one of the attorneys representing the children's parents, Anna and Michael Polovchak, said the decision may be appealed.

The Polovchaks immigrated to the United States Jan. 4, but after a few months in Chicago, Polovchak, who was working as a janitor, decided he wanted to return to the Soviet Union and his job as a bus driver. Walter and Natalie objected, running away from home and saying they would rather never see their parents again than return to the Ukraine.

Jogging: too tame for gardeners

by helen chesnut

"If you had our back yard, you wouldn't need to jog." That thought races through my mind every time I see a jogger pant past our front driveway. With all the boulder-rolling, root-pulling and sod-turning I've done this past year on our new property, jogging seems a tame form of exercise indeed.

If you have been feeling a little overweight or creaky lately and jogging holds no appeal, your garden can be a very great help to you in many different ways. I suppose the most obvious physical benefit one derives from the garden is the exercise your body receives while gardening but with a little thought, much greater conditioning can be had from this outdoor activity.

A couple of years ago I took a keep-fit ballet class and I adapted some of the exercises to my garden environment much to the wonderment of my husband who asked on more than one occasion how I happened to be in a particularly peculiar position in the tomato patch.

Bending over a plant, I would sometimes adopt a deep squat, knees held wide apart. Another time, I would work on one foot, the other leg held outstretched behind me, toes nicely pointed. The idea is to gently stretch the body as you work, thus toning muscles and making each joint of the body more supple. Some experts contend that you are as young as your connective tissue, which means that the more loose and supple you become, the younger you become.

Your vegetable patch holds vast resources for the person who would like to trim off a few pounds and inches. In most cases the food nature provides us, in the state she provides it, gives best value with no extra calories. It's when we overcook it, refine it, grind it into powder, instantize it and cover it with thick sauces that nature's gifts become dynamite to our well-being.

Vegetables picked fresh from the garden, steamed until they are just crisp-tender (I use a spaghetti-type cooking pot so the vegetables are held above the water, or cook waterless), and served flavored with lemon juice, soy sauce, Worcester sauce or chopped green onion provide maximum nutrition without the extra calories of butter or cream sauce.

Delicious low-calorie, home-made vegetable soups can be made with a meat base if you take your roast bones or soup bones, add boiling water and simmer for several hours with salt, lemon juice, herbs and spices. The trick is to drain the stock and discard any bits you don't want in the soup, then cool it, refrigerate it and lift off the fat that forms on top. Thus easily you can have a fatless soup. Just add chopped vegetables fresh from the garden, and cubed potato for a slightly thick soup instead of using fattening flour.

Our family's favorite soup is minestrone, started with the bones of a pork roast. Onion, garlic, tomato, celery especially make for a nice Italian-style soup. Borsch, a gorgeous beet soup, is another worthwhile recipe to investigate, particularly for those with a large garden surplus of these vegetables. Both these soups we cook in large quantities and feeze for the winter. Into the Borsch I put every garden vegetable, including onion roots and tops, broad beans, carrots, dill, peas and so on.

The ultimate in low-calorie nutrition has got to be Gaspacho, a mixture of garden vegetables with garlic, including tomato and cucumber, whirled in the blender with beef broth and tomato juice — uncooked.

Insurance fraud revealed in sunken oil tanker

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard issued warrants Monday for the arrests of an American and three other men suspected of involvement in the biggest alleged marine fraud in history — the mysterious sinking of a giant oil tanker off the western coast of Africa six months ago.

The Yard identified the four suspects as Frederick Soudan, a Lebanese-born American from Houston, Tex.; Dimitrios Georgeoulis, a Greek seaman; tanker company directors Anton Reidel from Rotterdam, the Netherlands; and Johannes Jurgen Locks from Frankfurt, West Germany.

They are accused of conspiring to defraud the Shell Oil group and Lloyd's, the London insurance underwriters, a Yard statement said. Published reports at the time said the Salem's oil cargo was secretly unloaded in South Africa and then the tanker was scuttled for the insurance money.

The tanker was insured for $24 million by Lloyd's and its cargo of oil for $57 million, but Lloyd's said it has not yet paid any money to the four.

The warrants were issued at London's Guildhall magistrates' court after a six-month investigation by a team of Scotland Yard detectives who searched Europe and South Africa for clues to the mysterious disappearance of the Liberian-registered Salem last Jan. 17.

The Yard statement said the alleged fraud was committed between December of last year and January.

A Yard spokesman indicated it is unlikely the four men can be brought to trial in Britain. She said the offences are "not extraditable" and that the Yard does not know where the men are.

Suspicions about the tanker's sinking were first raised when an oil slick near the spot appeared far smaller than expected from the size of the cargo it was carrying.

The 213,000-ton Salem was loaded with 193,132 tons of crude oil at Kuwait last Dec. 9-10. The oil was owned by Shell and was for sale in Europe.

The tanker never reached its destination. Lloyd's investigators concur with published reports that said the oil was secretly unloaded at Durban, South Africa, before the vessel was scuttled in the Atlantic Ocean.

The tanker was reported to have taken 30 hours to sink, although the first distress signals apparently were put out 20 minutes after another ship sighted it sinking.

Applying for the arrest warrants in court Monday, Detective Inspector John Spears said: "The charges in the warrants refer to the conspiracy to take the oil out of Shell International's possession and the possible subsequent effort to defraud the insurance market in this country over the loss of the ship."

The Yard said the warrants will be circulated through Interpol, the Paris-based international police organization, and the FBI in Washington, in efforts to reach countries where the wanted men might be.

Soudan, one of the four men wanted, was reported to have bought the tanker through the U.S.-based Oxford Shipping Co., just before the ship sailed on its last voyage.

Georgeoulis, the Salem's master, was arrested in Senegal in February and extradited to Liberia to face charges, but was freed in June now is reported to be back in Greece.

Meanwhile, in New Orleans, La., Lloyd's is facing a payout of $300 million, the biggest settlement in shipping history, in a claim for improperly insulated tanks in three methane carriers built at a shipyard here, the insurance company says.

The proposed settlement calls for Lloyd's to pay $90 million as soon as an agreement is signed by various companies involved in litigation over the tankers, and $70 million a year for the next three years.

Cracks in the methane tanks' polyurethane coatings and in foam used to protect the tanker's hull were found during tests on the first ship built.

Police battle Riviera nudity

NICE (UPI) — Armed with a long-ignored law, French police have launched a summer offensive against what they call a "nudist invasion" of beaches along the Riviera.

Acting on complaints from various mayors and conservative civic groups, police began enforcing a law banning nude sun bathing in public places.

The campaign got off to a mild start in July, when police merely warned nudists they were violating the law, and ordered them to put on bathing suits.

This week, the serious crackdown began as police started booking bathers on charges of offending decency.

Six gendarmes were reported to have booked 15 persons Wednesday at a well-known nudist beach near Cap D'Ail, half-way between Monaco and Nice.

Local newspapers charged that police were looking for pornographic films being made at the beach, but grabbed a group of "innocent" naked sun worshippers.

The police action has raised some worried eyebrows because hundreds, if not thousands, of women go topless on most public beaches.

Outraged nudists along the Riviera were reported to have named a spokesman to voice their views.

A police official said, however, that nudism was outlawed in France in 1976 and that the law now must be fully enforced.

He said that in the past, nudists were tolerated because they used to confine themselves to a secluded coves.

"This year," he charged, "the nudists are spreading out all over the coast, and many neighbors are complaining.

Tourists decapitated by Peruvian bandits

LIMA (AP) — Police have arrested four men and accused them of shooting and beheading three tourists from West Germany in the Peruvian Andes, Lima newspapers reported Monday.

The newspapers said a fourth West German tourist pretended he was dead after being shot in the head and escaped to report the attack to police.

Police reported the assailants had admitted shooting and beheading their victims in order to steal their money and equipment, the press reports said.

The newspaper Expreso said the West German consulate identified the victims as Rolf Vandenkal, 23; Jen Mantrey, 23, and Martin Goldsche, 24.

The wounded tourist, Volker Sodich, 23, is in hospital in the Cordillera Blanca mountain climbing district some 400 kilometres north of Lima, the newspapers reported.

Expreso said the four West Germans were medical students who had arrived in Peru recently.

No one was available at the West German embassy who would comment on the case. There were long delays in telephone service to Caraz, a small town north of Yungay where the police investigation is being co-ordinated.

The press reports quoted police as saying the tourists were attacked at their campsite about 8:30 p.m. last Tuesday near the Llanganuco Lake north of Yungay and at the foot of Mount Huascaran, Peru's highest mountain.

Expreso said the police surprised the four alleged assassins Sunday while they were resting in a mountain cabin not far from the scene of the reported crime. The police recovered travellers cheques, U.S. currency and other personal items belonging to the four West Germans, the newspapers said.

The four Peruvians led police to the three heads, which had been buried several metres from where the bodies were found, the newspapers reported.

Dredging Loch Ness for monster's remains

LONDON (AP) — Midsummer monster-hunts have disturbed the placid waters of Loch Ness since the year 565. In the latest venture of this now-annual ritual, a team of naturalists left London on Monday to dredge the Scottish lake with a motor-powered raft and catch Nessie in a net.

The dredging experiment is based on the idea that if there are live monsters in the Loch there must also be dead ones, said Adrian Shine, a plastics industrialist and professional diver who is the leader of the self-styled Loch Ness project.

"If we bring up any bones of ancient creatures, we shall have gone a long way to establishing the reality of Loch Ness monsters," he said.

Endlessly photographed, analysed, explored and just plain stared at in the years since St. Columba first recorded seeing Nessiteras Rhomboptteryx — affectionately known as Nessie — in the 6th century, Loch Ness will be subjected to scrutinization by about 30 or 40 sophisticated cameras laid out like mines in a minefield.

"Our idea is saturation coverage," Shine said. "It's no use messing about any more. We have got to start surveying very large areas of water in a systematic, methodical way."

Track wedges derailed train

DUBLIN (AP) — A 64-year-old railway worker was quoted Monday as saying he had been moving a hooper truck and jammed two wedges into a switching track just before an express train derailed Friday in the Irish republic's worst rail disaster.

Seventeen people were killed and nearly 60 others hurt.

"I suppose they'll blame me for it all," Willie Joe Condon was quoted as telling the Irish Independent newspaper about crash. "But how was I to know a train was coming? There was no flagman to warn me."

Condon, who was due to retire in a year's time, was quoted as saying that as soon as the signalman at the Buttevant village station shouted that the Dublin-to-Cork express was "screaming into the station, I rushed for my crowbar to get out the scotches."

"I got one of the scotches out of the points. Before I could start at the second scotch, the train was on top of me."

He dived out of the way just before the train jumped the track.

Queen Mum fetes 80th

LONDON (AP) — Thousands of gifts, from a giant magnum of champagne to a piece of knitwear to keep a teapot warm, poured into the London home of the Queen Mother on Monday as she marked her 80th birthday.

Other tributes included boxes of chocolates — which the Queen Mum, as she is affectionately referred to, is known to adore — and a huge bouquet of 80 red roses delivered by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, of which the Queen Mother is patron.

Butcher George Stafford sent a prize-winning black pudding weighing six pounds, a sausage made from pig's blood and fat, regarded as a delicacy in the Lancashire mill towns.

Standing on the balcony of Clarence House, the Queen Mother smiled and waved as hundreds of well-wishers below roared a chorus of Happy Birthday and gaily-colored balloons inscribed "We Love You" climbed into the sky.

A small boy gives the Queen Mum a posy of flowers

At midday, a 21-gun salute boomed out from London's Hyde Park and a squadron of jet aircraft flew past in E-formation.

Some fans left home as early as 4 a.m. to get a place at the front of rows of seats outside the Queen Mum's home. Mailmen delivered nine sacks of birthday cards.

Meanwhile, a packed House of Lords unanimously approved two motions of birthday congratulations and a London disc jockey played one of the Queen Mother's favorite discs, courtesy of a special request by her younger daughter, Princess Margaret.

Almost every national newspaper carried a front-page picture of the smiling Queen Mum, the earl's daughter who never expected to become Queen and has been a widow now for nearly 30 years.

She became Queen in 1936 when her brother-in-law, King Edward VIII, abdicated without being crowned. Her husband, King George VI, died in 1952 and was succeeded by their daughter, Queen Elizabeth II.

Met murder sex slaying?

NEW YORK (AP) — Police are said to have found new evidence at the Metropolitan Opera House leading them to believe the killing of Canadian violinist Helen Hagnes Mintiks was a sex slaying.

Mrs. Mintiks's nude, bound body was found in an air shaft at the opera house in Lincoln Centre for the Performing Arts several hours after she disappeared the night of July 23. The free-lance musician had been playing with the orchestra accompanying the Berlin Ballet and failed to reappear after an intermission.

Chief Medical Examiner Elliot Gross has said an autopsy showed no evidence that the 30-year-old blonde native of Aldergrove was sexually assaulted. He said the fall apparently was the cause of death.

Published reports Monday said, however, that police searching the maze of corridors, dressing rooms, storage rooms, rehearsal rooms and stairways backstage at the Met have found two items on a lower level.

The discoveries were described as a tampon lying on a stairway and a paper napkin stained with semen, stuffed in a pipe.

A police department spokesman declined to comment on the reports.

The new evidence was reported to have been found in an area two levels below the women's dressing room where Mrs. Mintiks was last seen alive, and one level below the orchestra pit, where she had left her violin on her chair after playing during the first segment of the Berlin Ballet's performance.

An unidentified ballet dancer had told police the violinist entered an elevator at the stage level about 9:40 p.m. and gave police a description of a man seen in the elevator with her. From the description, a police artist composed a sketch of the man.

Detectives went to Washington over the weekend to show the sketch to members of the Berlin Ballet company in hopes others may have seen the man that night.

The Berlin dancers are on a two-week American engagement.

Turkish embassy attack

LYON, France (AP) — A gunman walked up to a desk in the Turkish consulate in this southeastern French city today and opened fire, wounding three people, two seriously, police said.

The attack took place as an accomplice stood watch outside, police said, and the gunman and the accomplice fled after the shooting.

A consulate employee, Mehemed Borzdag, was wounded in the arm by the gunfire but ran to a nearby police station and got help.

The two seriously wounded people were taken to a hospital.

One of them, Muzjin Totrak, 30, was hit in the groin and abdomen, police said. The identity of the other seriously wounded person was not immediately made public.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack, but four clandestine Armenian groups have been in the forefront of assaults on Turkish diplomats recently.

On Thursday, one of the groups, the Armenian Secret Army, claimed responsibility for killing a Turkish diplomat in Athens and wounding his wife and two children.

St.Helens all aglow

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Aerial observers reported "a bright red glow about 500 feet in diameter" inside the massive crater atop Mount St. Helens as five small earthquakes jarred the area.

The glow was probably coming from superheated rocks on the crater floor.

The earthquakes rumbled through the Marble Mountain area about five miles southeast of the crater.

Delay fixed link, says report

CATASTROPHE though it may be for some felines, Sassy here actually enjoys going for a dip every now and then. Sassy, with owner Sandi Collins, 17, of Oshawa, Ont., likes to beat the heat with a quick cat-paddle around the family pool. Sandi says her cat's watery ways 'just came naturally'

Ferries still less costly

The Canadian Press

There should be a two-year delay on any decision to build a fixed link connecting mainland B.C. with Vancouver Island, says an expert hired by the provincial cabinet to study the controversial proposal.

Vancouver economic consultant Garth Edge says the ferry system is still financially preferable to a tunnel or bridge, which would cost between $3 billion and $4 billion.

But his 80-page report to Science Minister Pat McGeer also says the government should continue to study a possible link because the economics of the idea will become more favorable as traffic volumes increase.

Edge's report is one of four to be submitted within the next few weeks as part of a $100,000 pre-feasibility study on the proposal.

The plan, proposed by McGeer last spring, is strongly opposed by residents of the Gulf Islands and Vancouver Island. They say a fixed linke would destroy their lifestyle.

The other reports project costs between $1.75 billion and $4 billion for a 55-kilometre floating bridge across the strait or a 70-kilometre tunnel.

The two-lane floating bridge as envisaged by McGeer would be designed for motor vehicles and would include sections of submerged tunnels to accommodate shipping lanes.

The bored tunnel would accommodate a double-track railway but make no provision for car traffic.

None of the reports recommend a prefabricated tunnel laid on the ocean floor or suspended below the surface of the strait, proposals favored by some consulting engineers.

Edge projects the province will have to spend $1.2 billion on ferries between the mainland and the island within the next 35 years.

He estimates a five-percent return on that outlay, compared with a 3.5-percent return from the cost of a fixed link.

Edge suggests detailed studies on the fixed link could be started in two years and construction started in 10 years if the forecasts for tremendous growth in ferry traffic across strait prove accurate.

He foresees traffic doubling to seven million vehicles and 18 million passengers by 1990.

Claudia Donato, a Victoria woman who is organizing a petition opposing a fixed link, is convinced most of the Social Credit cabinet wants to shelve the idea for a few years.

She says her campaign has garnered more than 7,000 signatures on a petition which she will present to McGeer.

2½-hour rescue effort saves Potholes victim

Rescuers worked 2½ hours to get a youth with multiple fractures from the bed of the Sooke River to an ambulance after a 40-foot plunge Sunday afternoon.

Daniel Philip O'Brien, 17, of 2186 McNeill lost his footing at Sooke Potholes Park, hitting rocks and coming to rest partly in the river.

He suffered two broken legs, a cracked pelvis, cracked wrist and shoulder and a head injury and is in stable condition at Victoria General Hospital.

His mother, Mrs. Rita O'Brien, said the youth remained conscious throughout the ordeal.

Mrs. O'Brien said she hasn't had a chance to talk in detail to her son about the accident but he has told her the moment he fell, it was as if he were watching it happen to someone else.

He told her he had landed like a cat.

The victim's brother, Chris, 20, yelled to people down below, then ran for the parking lot to get help.

The response was immediate.

David Freeman, 1265 Grant, and another unidentified rescuer, carried O'Brien out of the water 15 feet up the bank where another helper gave him first aid.

A doctor was nearby.

"He said the people who administered first aid knew what they were doing. They did just the right things," Mrs. O'Brien said.

A Times carrier for six years, young O'Brien "rattled off all his customers' names" Monday when arrangements were being made for substitute delivery, the mother said.

"All the people who helped deserve to know that through their efforts it came out okay."

Sooke RCMP said they were called at 2:54 by the park ranger, and police and ambulance crew with paramedic John Heavenor attended.

They found O'Brien below a mossy rock ridge where he had slipped while climbing.

The injured youth had tried to grab a tree but missed and plunged over the edge.

The rescue team used a basket stretcher and ropes to get O'Brien up to the ambulance by 5:30.

Potholes Park is a popular place with swimmers, hikers and picnickers. But the river's rocky chasm can be hazardous.

Two weeks ago a woman visitor slipped off a cliff to her death a short distance upstream from where O'Brien went over.

Mrs. O'Brien said people can't be prevented from climbing the rocks but she suggested they might be served with a trail and proper footholds along the edge of the river.

Carter counter-attacks over 'Billygate' affair

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Jimmy Carter, threatened by accusations of scandal and incompetence, mounted a major counter-attack Monday night against his accusers and his political critics.

In a detailed report to the U.S. Congress and an hour-long news conference on television, Carter said that neither he nor any member of his administration "violated any law nor committed any impropriety" in connection with his brother Billy's performance as a lobbyist for Libya.

He also served notice, one week before the Democratic national convention, that he will fight for the right to seek another presidential term as chosen candidate of his party in the Nov. 4 election.

At the same time, Carter conceded he had made mistakes in handling the Billy Carter case. He left open questions about his judgment in the affair. And he acknowledged that he trails seriously in popular political favor just three months before the election.

Asked as he left the White House news conference whether he believes his effort has put the suggestion of scandal to rest, the president replied:

"I don't know. It depends on how you all handle it and how the American people judge it."

Billy Carter, who watched the president's statements on television at a motel in Americus, Ga., said his older brother spoke the truth. But he declined the president's implicit invitation during the news conference to disclose what he has done with the $220,000 he has received from Libya, payments Billy has described as part of a loan but which helped generate the political uproar during the last three weeks.

Asked how he feels now about his relations with the North African country he promoted during the last two years — he registered

Hanging judge Nobel?

BEIRUT (UPI) — Iran's "hanging judge," Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, says he is as good a candidate for the Nobel Peace Prize as all the world's police chiefs put together.

Khalkhali, the roving Islamic judge and author of dozens of summary death warrants, said he has been recommended for the Nobel Prize by "several prestigious Americans."

In Sweden, chairman of the Nobel Committee John Sanness said "no comment" when asked if Khalkhali had been nominated for the prize. He said the committee does not confirm the names of nominees.

Hurricane churns west kills eight

KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — "Great hurricane" Allen today aimed its 275 km/h winds, torrential rain and thunderous seas at the islands of Jamaica and Hispaniola.

The worst storm to hit the eastern Caribbean in a century left at least eight dead so far in its trail of destruction.

A hurricane watch was in effect for Jamaica and the southwest pennisula of Haiti. Gale warnings remained in effect for the southern sections of the Dominican Republic and Haiti, which make up the island of Hispaniola.

National Weather Service officials said reconnaissance planes recorded the pressure in the hurricane's center at 27.05 inches of mercury, confirming the storm as the worst hurricane to hit the eastern Caribbean in a century.

Hurricane forecaster Paul Hebert in Miami said, "this is certainly one of the most intense storms the Atlantic, Gulf Coast and Caribean has ever experienced." If the storm hits the islands "it will be devastating," he said.

Allen continued to move toward the west-northwest at 32 km/h and was expected to remain on this course. Hurricane force winds extended out 64 kilometres in all directions from the center. Gale force winds extended outward 270 kilometres to the north of the center and 160 kilometres to the south.

On Jamaica, a resort island about the size of Connecticut and with a population of 2.1 million, officials of the Office of Disaster Preparedness called emergency planning sessions to set up shelters.

Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley assured his people emergency plans were being made and offered his country's help to eastern Caribbean islands already struck by Allen's fury.

Advance winds from Allen began to hit Santo Domingo, heavily damaged by Hurricane David last year. Wind-hurled debris damaged roads in the bayfront area of the city and heavy rains flooded streets in San Cristobal, 16 kilometres west of the capital city of a million people.

Court tells Alcan to obey federal spillage order

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Aluminum Co. of Canada must obey a federal order to release more water into the Nechako River, Mr. Justice Thomas Berger of B.C. Supreme Court ruled today.

Berger said in an eight-page judgment, on a request by the federal government for an injunction, that the government has shown it has a right under the Fisheries Act to make such an order.

"Alcan has not flouted the law," the judge wrote. "It has simply said, on legal advice, that it believes the minister's order is unconstitutional.

"I have reached the conclusion, however, that Alcan must obey . . . there will be an order directing Alcan to comply with the minister's directive."

Berger said the dispute was one which could not be swiftly or easily resolved but he said someone must have the power to determine the discharges of water that will be necessary.

"The question is whether the minister or Alcan should exercise that power. The minister represents the public interest. The power ultimately must be his."

Berger said an additional matter was that the order purports to regulate discharges of water through the Skins Lake spillway until June 30, 1981, with rates of discharge laid down in advance for the whole period.

He said the 8,000 cubic feet a second discharge for the period ending Aug. 20, the time with which the injunction was concerned, seems to be reasonable to protect the fish and flood the spawning grounds.

Berger said if it appears the discharges required by the minister after Aug. 20 are unnecessary, the order would not be in force.

Murder story in contest may be the real thing?

TORONTO (CP) — New York City police have appealed to The Star to help seek a man who may have committed a brutal murder and then sent the paper a story about it.

Robert Callan, an investigator with the police, appealed to The Star last week following an anonymous entry into the newspaper's annual short story contest.

The story, entitled Motiveless Murder Relic, tells how the author cut the throat of a woman he had gagged and handcuffed in a basement apartment in 1977. The location is New York City, where of 1,557 murders recorded that year, 650 have not been solved.

As one of hundreds submitted to The Star, the story was so realistic that the newspaper consulted several psychiatrists and a psychic as well as sending it to New York City Police. Because Callan is one of 50 investigators working on the murder of Canadian violinist Helen Mintiks and has been ordered to remain on the Mintiks case, it may be a while before he has a chance to check the authenticity of the story.

"I pulled the knife through her throat," it begins, before going on to describe the sights and sounds with accuracy that startles medical experts.

"He certainly has some anatomical knowledge of what happens if you cut someone's throat," said one doctor.

After describing how the life ebbed from his victim's body, the author says he removed his rubber gloves, showered the blood off his body and took a bath.

In the six-page text, the author describes his life, his schooling and his best friend, a dog, which was shot by his father. References in the story describe the author as 30 years old at the time of the murder — Dec. 31, 1977 — and staying on the 7th floor of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. Another reference says the author arrived in the city a week earlier.

The only clue to his personal life is revealed during the paragraphs analyzing the reasons for the murder. He refers to the "bottomless perdition of a too early marriage" he once fell into.

Two of three psychiatrists consulted by The Star believed the story was only the product of someone's imagination rather than a genuine case of murder.

But Dr. Jerry Cooper, a Toronto psychiatrist who has been consulted on 30 to 50 murders a year from all over Ontario, says the strong feelings evident in the story could be those of an "explosive" individual.

"Whoever wrote this definitely has something wrong with him unless he is a creative genius," says Cooper.

Brampton psychic Geraldine Smith, currently working on a murder case in Los Angeles, said she believes the story is true, after it was read to her over the phone. Ms. Smith says she detects names and descriptions concerning the case but senses the author has committed suicide.

State of B.C.? depressing

VANCOUVER — For someone who spends his life contemplating the nation from somewhere over Moose Jaw, the present stance of the Social Credit government is depressing.

When you spend your time flitting from east to west and back again, your major occupation is defending British Columbia from the assaults of the smug inhabitants of central Canada.

The belief that the province is populated almost exclusively by faith healers, foot fetishists and open-mouth radio hosts is strongly held along the banks of the Rideau.

For someone to suggest that the perception is based on worn out myths is enough to bring hoots and jeers at any gathering of more than six.

The Phlying Phil Gaglardis and Tom Terrifics and other esoteric practitioners of the art of politics long ago convinced Ontario and environs that to cover politics in B.C. one first of all had to be equipped with a butterfly net.

W.A.C. Bennett, in his more eccentric moods, helped to convince Ottawa that only parochial tin pots resided in Victoria and ruled the province.

Only on the death of Bennett was there a more sober and objective appraisal and his accomplishments were treated far better in death than when he was in active politics.

Since he left the arena in 1972, there were some of us who tried to convince the non-believers in the far off East that there were a few politicians in Victoria who did not hang from trees and blow their noses with their table napkins.

Bill Bennett himself set out to convince the doubters in the nation's capital that he was collecting around him a crew of modern, professional men.

So today? The cheap hints of quasi-separatist stirrings emanate from the Mini-Wac Camp. Strutting and posturing from Victoria is an almost daily feature now as the Socreds scramble to catch the slipstream of the Lougheed grumbles.

Not only has B.C., as the largest western province, abdicated leadership to Alberta (and there are other factors than money) Victoria now looks like a pale imitation of Edmonton in its echo chamber responses on the national scene.

Bill Bennett, who was once seen in Ottawa as a serious young man dedicated to removing B.C.'s rather scatterhead reputation nationally, now is looked upon as an increasingly desperate man who will suggest almost anything in his nervous bid to stay in power.

There's a perception outside this province (not to mention what is going on in it) that it is now just a matter of time until the patient Dave Barrett and the subdued NDP will be back in power.

There's the perception that Bennett will push his dangerous game as far as he thinks is necessary in order to win votes.

The hints of an imitation-Levesque referendum is so ludicrous that no intelligent observer takes it seriously, but Bennett knows that breed is in rather short supply.

The king's taster in this charade is the emminent Dr. Patrick McGeer, who has been unleashed to vent his increasingly paranoid view about the evil monsters who dwell in Ottawa.

This is no loose-mouthed Vander Zalm, or a delightfully zany Gaglardi, making all those looney little page one brighteners that so please news editors of Toronto papers.

This is Dr. McGeer, one of the senior members of the Bennett cabinet, a man who, as his personal chances for power have receded, has become increasingly aggressive in these free-form ideas he throws about.

A floating bridge through the high tides to Vancouver Island? Cars that run on some strange new substance? Flamboyant satellite discs on the parliamentary lawn? The ideas are flung out, western independence following the others until next week's zippy headlines will reveal yet another McGeer brainstorm.

The Bennett crew is becoming more strident in its hints and mutterings as if realizing at last how far behind it has been left by Lougheed's Alberta.

Premier Bennett said, "B.C. is not for sale."

No, just its reputation.

Superstitions still bloom

VANCOUVER (CP) — People might say spilled salt indicates sloppy table manners and a broken mirror is only shattered glass but the age of superstition is far from over.

"I don't think we've changed that much," says Larry Ward, a psychology professor at the University of B.C.

"I think we are probably just as superstitious about little things, gambling and luck, because these are the things that the average person doesn't understand."

Ward says it doesn't matter whether a rabbit's foot helped your team win the game as long as you act as though it did.

Even those who say they are not superstitious can fall into irrational behavior — like the person who pushes the same elevator button several times although he knows that one touch of the button will get him to the floor he wants.

And there are other people who take their umbrella to work on a sunny day because they just know it's going to rain if they leave it at home.

Horse trainer June Anderson, who wears four horseshoe charms for luck, is serious about superstition when it comes to saddling winners at Exhibition Park race track. She once wore the same suit for three weeks after getting a couple of winners one day.

"I was afraid to wear any other suit."

Ward says that's the law of effect, one explanation for superstition.

"When reinforcement happens, all behavior before that is increased. Sometimes the reinforcement is connected to the behavior and sometimes it isn't."

Shortstop Tim Nordbrook of baseball's Vancouver Canadians of the Pacific Coast League says he's not superstitious but a certain pancake house became a favorite eating place when he went on a recent hitting streak.

"We just kept going back. My wife liked the pancakes and I liked the hits."

Actress Beth Kaplan of the Arts Club says she has to say "good show" to her dresser before going on stage or else "something is going to go wrong."

Gerrie Brooks of the Playhouse theatre company can list many other theatre superstitions.

"There shouldn't be any live flowers on stage or peacock feathers. Of course, you never say good luck. And it's bad luck to put your shoes on the makeup table. They also say if you have a bad dress rehearsal, it means a good opening night but I think that's wishful thinking."

Then there's director Janet Wright who doesn't follow the rituals.

"You know that thing about whistling in the dressing room or saying, 'Macbeth'? The first chance I get, I whistle or say 'Macbeth.' I guess that's my superstition. I hate being a sheep."

Ward says that because something is a superstition that doesn't mean it doesn't work.

"Sometimes the very behavior that we call superstition does have an effect on the person. One of the big problems of people who perform — actors, sports figures — is nervousness. If the behavior of wearing a good luck charm calms the person, it might not be a superstition after all."

Winery going up on Indian land

OLIVER (CP) — The 170-member Osoyoos Indian Band has reached agreement with the T.G. Bright Co. of Niagara Falls, Ont., to build a winery on band property in the Okanagan Valley.

The band already owns more than 50,000 hectares of prime valley vineyards and has formed an all-Indian company, Inkameep Vineyards Ltd.

Vineyard manager Ted Brouwer said that with the help of federal money, construction of the $1.6 million winery, the sixth in the province, will begin this fall.

"It's a unique 25-year agreement whereby Bright will lease the building, supply the equipment with the band members having first refusal of jobs and also growing the grapes," Brouwer said.

Cost of the equipment, which will be supplied by Bright, is estimated at $3.5 million with initial capacity between 800,000 and 1,000,000 gallons a year.

Most of the 700 tons of grapes the Indians grow each year now are sold to Andres Wines of Port Moody under a contract arrangement Brouwer said is worth close to $150,000 to band members.

THE MANAGEMENT OF ENERGY IN CANADA. ONE OF A SERIES:

YOU COULD BE HEATING YOUR HOUSE WITH GAS FROM THE COLDEST PLACE ON EARTH.

Natural gas under the ice? Twenty years ago we suspected it. Now we've found it. In huge quantities.

We know where it is. Under the Arctic islands and in the surrounding seabeds. Some hot spots: King Christian Island, Melville Island, Ellef Ringnes Island. The most recent strikes were drilled from floating ice islands, three hundred meters above the ocean floor.

We know how much there is – enough to increase Canada's total gas reserves by 20%. Enough to heat every Canadian home for more than 15 years.

To get this far has cost millions, and all Canadians have a stake in the find. The exploration leader is Panarctic Oils Limited. The Government of Canada, through Petro-Canada, owns 45% of Panarctic. The balance is split among 29 companies, most of them Canadian.

Could the gas be moved south by pipeline? Probably – we've built some of the world's biggest.

Could it be moved south by tanker? Yes.

A HOT NEW IDEA TO MOVE ARCTIC GAS.

An unique experiment by Petro-Canada, Alberta Gas Trunk Line and a consortium of shipping firms (called Melville Shipping Limited) is well advanced, and could put Canada in the forefront of Arctic shipping the world over.

Known as the "Arctic Pilot Project", it involves converting the natural gas to liquid, and then moving it to a southern terminal in tankers with massive ice-breaking hulls, capable of moving through ice 2.5 meters thick – and through ice ridges as much as 20 meters thick, 120 meters wide.

Such tankers would have engines five times as powerful as those of present-day tankers carrying liquefied natural gas (LNG). They would have the most sophisticated gear for ice navigation. At their southern terminals, the LNG would be regasified and moved into the pipeline network.

The cost would be high. Each tanker would cost half a billion dollars. And we would need several.

But the payoff could be even higher. The project could help us get off oil – especially from unreliable foreign sources. The planning goes on and it's being done carefully, with close attention to environmental, safety, and market conditions.

This is a Canadian project. It uses Canadian money, public and private, and Canadian people. It's on territory administered by the Government of Canada. It uses Canadian skills, Canadian technology. It's a total Canadian commitment.

Arctic gas is one sign that Canadians have what it takes to achieve their own energy goals. Future ads in this series by Energy, Mines and Resources Canada, will add to the story.

Swim, pedal, run!

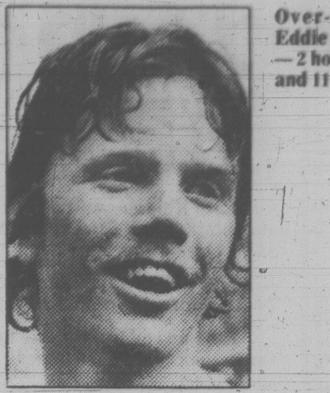
Lower Island athletes held off the Mainlanders and the Americans to win the men's and women's titles when Canada's first triathlon was staged Sunday at Elk Lake.

Eddie Smyth of Colwood was the first man home and Dawn Wilson of Victoria was the women's winner of the gruelling swim-pedal-run contest that drew 59 entrants from B.C., Washington and Oregon.

Organized by the Sri Chinmoy meditation centre's running club and patterned after similar events held in Connecticut and Hawaii, the triathlon involved a one-mile swim (the start below) in Elk Lake, a 20-mile cycle race and finally a six-mile run.

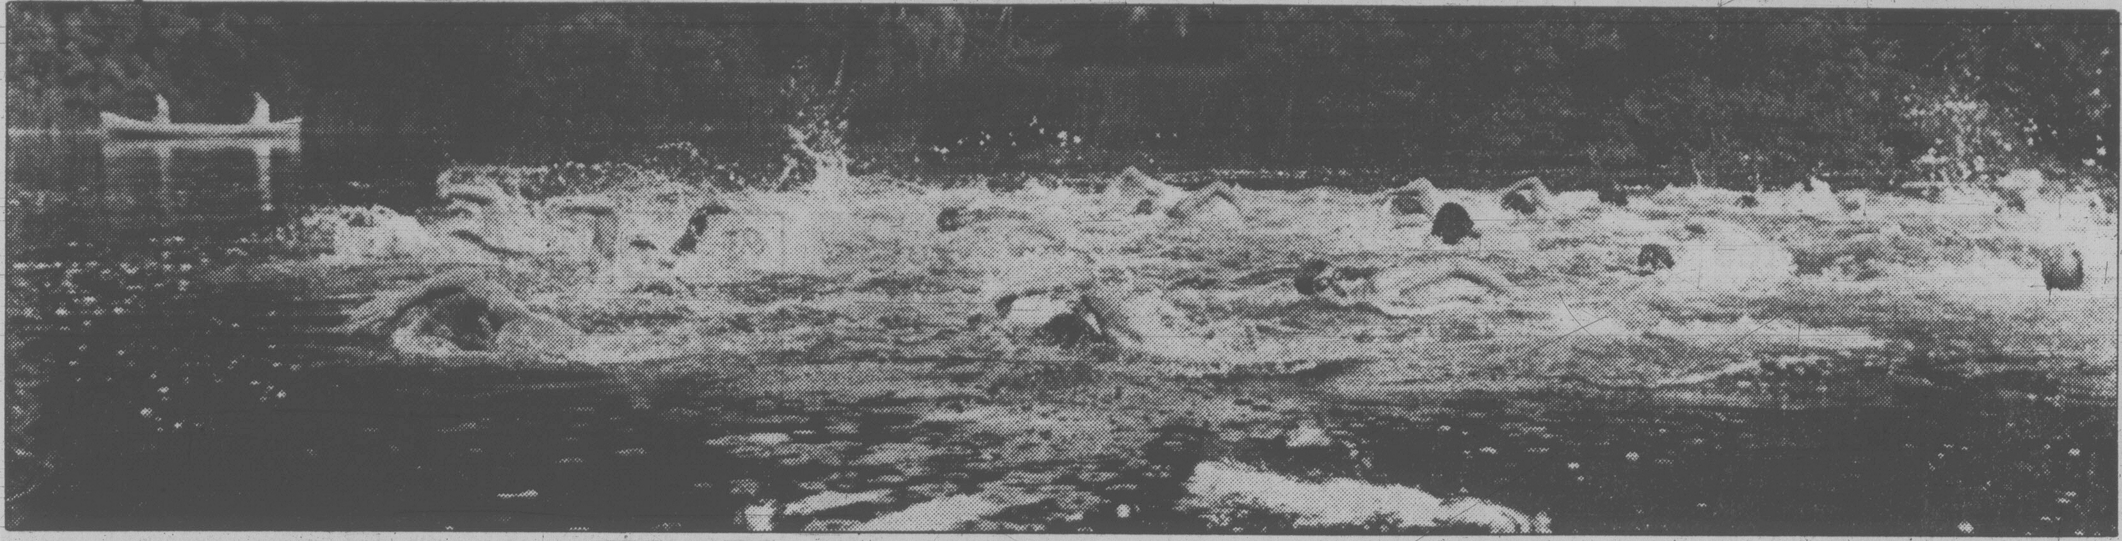
Smyth completed all three legs in just over two hours to finish ahead of Hugh Wilson of Vancouver, who was second, and Victoria's Bob Noble, who placed third, while Dawn Wilson was the fastest of seven women entered, covering the course in just under two and-a-half hours.

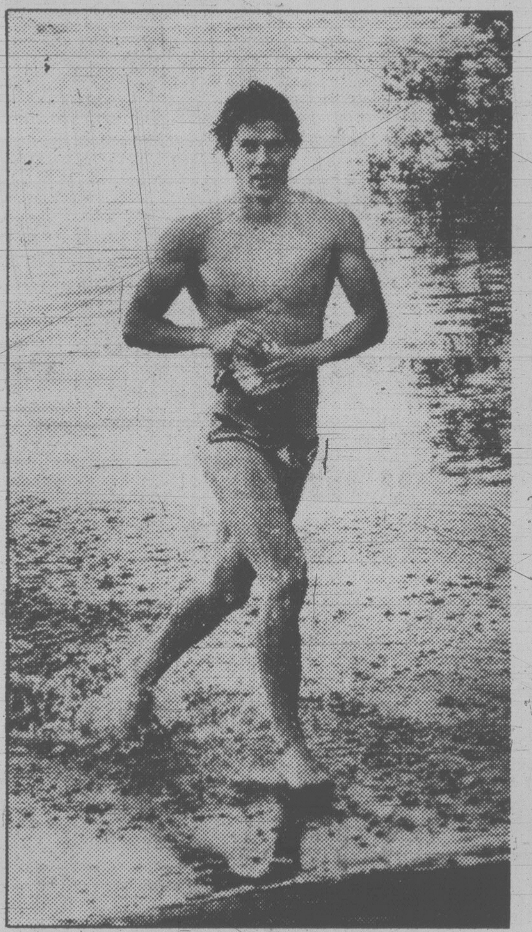
Meet director Dale Erven of the Sri Chinmoy club was delighted with the country's first triathlon and said today he hopes it will become an annual event.



Over-all men's winner Eddie Smyth of Colwood — 2 hours, one minute and 11 seconds

Women's winner Dawn Wilson of Victoria — 2 hours, 28 minutes and 49 seconds





Bob Noble of Victoria — 3rd over-all

Hugh Wilson of Vancouver — 2nd over-all

TOWN TALK

Talk of the city soliciting funds from Soochow, China to help Victoria in its Chinatown revitalization program is nothing but press speculation, Ald. Bob Wright said today.

Responding to a letter to the editor of the Times chiding the city for its supposedly greedy attitude towards its new twin city, Wright said it just wasn't true.

"Reporters put two and two together and got two," joked Ald. Bill McElroy.

"At no time has anyone or this committee had any discussion about trying to put the arm on Soochow for some dollars."

However, the city is trying to put the arm on the Provincial Capital Commission, Wright said, and McElroy — a PCC member — said there will probably be some good news for the city when it meets later this month.

Waterfront watchers filled their eyes on Dallas Road Sunday when the 8,424-square metre oil rig Ocean Bounty lumbered into view being towed by the tug Smit Rotterdam.

More than 300 feet tall, the oil rig, owned by Odeco Co. of New Orleans, La., has just completed a multi-million dollar refit in Nanoose Bay, carried out by about 80 employees of Vancouver Shipyards Co. Ltd.

After dropping off a Pacific Pilotage pilot, the tug and oil rig headed out to sea. Travelling via the Straits of Magellan, the oil rig's destination is the North Sea.

Prior to the refit, the Ocean Bounty was working off Alaska.

A spokesman for King Bros. Ltd. said she will be unable to come alongside the dock for examination because with her full cargo she draws 40 feet.

Suds go stadium-wide

Beer: desegregation

Beer drinkers have been so well-mannered in their segregated quarters at Royal Athletic Park that aldermen decided today to extend the privilege to all parts of the city-owned stadium.

"There have been no incidents of rowdiness or misuse of the privilege granted by council and it has helped to eliminate the problem of spectators bringing their own supplies into the park by devious ways and means," city recreation director Jack Morgan said.

Council on June 26 allowed the consumption of beer in a small section of the stands, after learning the practice of allowing beer to be drunk only in a small area underneath the bleachers was not working.

Morgan told council's parks and recreation committee that since imbibers were allowed in the cheap seats, more than 2,000 bottles of beer have been sold for total sales of $2,500. The city keeps the profits — Morgan did not say what the city's net proceeds were.

Aldermen approved extension of beer drinking to the rest of the stadium for a 30-day test. Beer sales are also restricted to Victoria Budgets' softball and Victoria Blues' baseball games.

In other business, council's land use planning committee extended the successful Chinatown paint-up program to three buildings outside the three-block area designated by council last fall.

Ramsay Machine Works at the foot of Fisgard, the Station Hotel at Pandora and Station and B.C. Produce Co. at 529 Pandora will receive matching funds and help from city staff on design and color schemes to clean up the exterior of their buildings.

Chief city planner Geoff Greenhalgh said the program, established with a $30,000 city fund last year, has been highly successful.

"There's been an excellent response to the paint-up scheme," he told the committee.

To date, $19,256 has been spent by the city, matching equal amounts from building owners.

Greenhalgh said it is important that the machine shop be include in the program because it will form the backdrop to the Gate of Harmonious Interest to be built at Fisgard and Government.

N-protest to balloon at Comox on Saturday

Aug. 9, 1945. Nagasaki, Japan. A United States warplane drops "Fat Man," the world's second operational atomic bomb.

Almost instantly, 75,000 people are dead, disfigured or doomed to a lifetime of radiation disease.

This Saturday is the 35th anniversary of the Nagasaki blast and organizers of a memorial protest at the Comox base of the Canadian Armed Forces hope 500 to 800 people will show up.

Demonstrators are expected from the Lower Mainland and many Vancouver Island points.

Organizing the event on the lower Island is Edith Adamson, a 66-year-old grandmother and spokesman for the Victoria Coalition for Disarmament.

Adamson wants any Victorians heading for the demonstration to meet in the Town and Country shopping centre parking lot at 9:30 a.m., the day of the protest.

"Then there will be a cavalcade to Comox," Adamson said.

She expects the 2 p.m. demonstration to be fairly brief.

Hundreds of helium-filled balloons will be released to give some inkling of how far nuclear fallout would spread if Comox was a target for an atom bomb.

Each balloon will contain a card asking the finder to mail the card to the protest organizers so that a theoretical spread of fallout can be established.

From the base, the demonstrators will make their way to Lewis Park in Courtenay where speakers can have their say.

Federal government reprentatives have been invited, Adamson said.

"But if they don't come we'll stage a puppet show," she added.

The stars of such a show would be Canada's own Punch and Judy — Pierre Trudeau and Joe Clark.

Adamson points out that Trudeau won world acclaim when he first announced years ago nuclear weapons would be removed from bases at Bagotville, Que., Chatham, N.B., and Comox.

The nuclear weapons were removed from Bagotville and Chatham but Comox still has them.

Trudeau has suggested they would be removed after the new F-18A fighter plane arrives to replace the obsolete Voodoo CF-101.

But in the recent alert that had seven Voodoos scrambling from Comox (it turned out to be a computer error and the planes were recalled by NORAD in six minutes), no planes carried nuclear weapons.

If the nuclear weapons weren't used by the Voodoos in a genuine alert, Adamson wonders why they haven't been removed from Comox as Trudeau promised.

Ferry system still less costly

The Canadian Press

There should be a two-year delay on any decision to build a fixed link connecting mainland B.C. with Vancouver Island, says an expert hired by the provincial cabinet to study the controversial proposal.

Vancouver economic consultant Garth Edge says the ferry system is still financially preferable to a tunnel or bridge, which would cost between $3 billion and $4 billion.

But his 80-page report to Science Minister Pat McGeer also says the government should continue to study a possible link because the economics of the idea will become more favorable as traffic volumes increase.

Edge's report is one of four to be submitted within the next few weeks as part of a $100,000 pre-feasibility study on the proposal.

The plan, proposed by McGeer last spring, is strongly opposed by residents of the Gulf Islands and Vancouver Island. They say a fixed link would destroy their lifestyle.

The other reports project costs between $1.75 billion and $4 billion for a 55-kilometre floating bridge across the strait or a 70-kilometre tunnel.

The two-lane floating bridge as envisaged by McGeer would be designed for motor vehicles and would include sections of submerged tunnels to accommodate shipping lanes.

The bored tunnel would accommodate a double-track railway but make no provision for car traffic.

None of the reports recommend a prefabricated tunnel laid on the ocean floor or suspended below the surface of the strait, proposals favored by some consulting engineers.

Edge projects the province will have to spend $1.2 billion on ferries between the mainland and the island within the next 35 years.

He estimates a five-per-cent return on that outlay, compared with a 3.5-per-cent return from the cost of a fixed link.

Edge suggests detailed studies on the fixed link could be started in two years and construction started in 10 years if the forecasts for tremendous growth in ferry traffic across the strait prove accurate.

He foresees traffic doubling to seven million vehicles and 18 million passengers by 1990.

Claudia Donato, a Victoria woman who is organizing a petition opposing a fixed link, is convinced most of the Social Credit cabinet wants to shelve the idea for a few years.

She says her campaign has garnered more than 7,000 signatures on a petition which she will present to McGeer.

2½-hour rescue effort saves Potholes victim

Rescuers worked 2½ hours to get a youth with multiple fractures from the bed of the Sooke River to an ambulance after a 40-foot plunge Sunday afternoon.

Daniel Philip O'Brien, 17, of 2186 McNeill lost his footing at Sooke Potholes Park, hitting rocks and coming to rest partly in the river.

He suffered two broken legs, a cracked pelvis, cracked wrist and shoulder and a head injury and is in stable condition at Victoria General Hospital.

His mother, Mrs. Rita O'Brien, said the youth remained conscious throughout the ordeal.

Mrs. O'Brien said she hasn't had a chance to talk in detail to her son about the accident but he has told her the moment he fell, it was as if he were watching it happen to someone else.

He told her he had landed like a cat.

The victim's brother, Chris, 20, yelled to people down below, then ran for the parking lot to get help.

The response was immediate.

David Freeman, 1265 Grant, and another unidentified rescuer, carried O'Brien out of the water 15 feet up the bank where another helper gave him first aid.

A doctor was nearby.

"He said the people who administered first aid knew what they were doing. They did just the right things," Mrs. O'Brien said.

A Times carrier for six years, young O'Brien "rattled off all his customers' names" Monday when arrangements were being made for substitute delivery, the mother said.

"All the people who helped deserve to know that through their efforts it came out okay."

Sooke RCMP said they were called at 2:54 by the park ranger, and police and ambulance crew with paramedic John Heavenor attended.

They found O'Brien below a mossy rock ridge where he had slipped while climbing.

The injured youth had tried to grab a tree but missed and plunged over the edge.

The rescue team used a basket stretcher and ropes to get O'Brien up to the ambulance by 5:30.

Potholes Park is a popular place with swimmers, hikers and picnickers. But the river's rocky chasm can be hazardous.

Two weeks ago a woman visitor slipped off a cliff to her death a short distance upstream from where O'Brien went over.

Mrs. O'Brien said people can't be prevented from climbing the rocks but she suggested they might be served with a trail and proper footholds along the edge of the river.

Carter counter-attacks over 'Billygate' affair

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Jimmy Carter, threatened by accusations of scandal and incompetence, mounted a major counter-attack Monday night against his accusers and his political critics.

In a detailed report to the U.S. Congress and an hour-long news conference on television, Carter said that neither he nor any member of his administration "violated any law nor committed any impropriety" in connection with his brother Billy's performance as a lobbyist for Libya.

He also served notice, one week before the Democratic national convention, that he will fight for the right to seek another presidential term as chosen candidate of his party in the Nov. 4 election.

At the same time, Carter conceded he had made mistakes in handling the Billy Carter case. He left open questions about his judgment in the affair. And he acknowledged that he trails seriously in popular political favor just three months before the election.

Asked as he left the White House news conference whether he believes his effort has put the suggestion of scandal to rest, the president replied:

"I don't know. It depends on how you'll handle it and how the American people judge it."

Billy Carter, who watched the president's statements on television at a motel in Americus, Ga., said his older brother spoke the truth. But he declined the president's implicit invitation during the news conference to disclose what he has done with the $220,000 he has received from Libya, payments Billy has described as part of a loan but which helped generate the political uproar during the last three weeks.

Asked how he feels now about his relations with the North African country he promoted during the last two years — he registered

Hanging judge Nobel?

BEIRUT (UPI) — Iran's "hanging judge," Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, says he is as good a candidate for the Nobel Peace Prize as all the world's police chiefs put together.

Khalkhali, the roving Islamic judge and author of dozens of summary death warrants, said he has been recommended for the Nobel Prize by "several prestigious Americans."

In Sweden, chairman of the Nobel Committee John Sanness said "no comment" when asked if Khalkhali had been nominated for the prize. He said the committee does not confirm the names of nominees.

Hurricane churns west kills eight

KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — "Great hurricane" Allen today aimed its 275 km/h winds, torrential rain and thunderous seas at the islands of Jamaica and Hispaniola.

The worst storm to hit the eastern Caribbean in a century left at least eight dead so far in its trail of destruction.

A hurricane watch was in effect for Jamaica and the southwest pennisula of Haiti. Gale warnings remained in effect for the southern sections of the Dominican Republic and Haiti, which make up the island of Hispaniola.

National Weather Service officials said reconnaissance planes recorded the pressure in the hurricane's center at 27.05 inches of mercury, confirming the storm as the worst hurricane to hit the eastern Caribbean in a century.

Hurricane forecaster Paul Hebert in Miami said, "this is certainly one of the most intense storms the Atlantic, Gulf Coast and Carribean has ever experienced." If the storm hits the islands "it will be devastating," he said.

Allen continued to move toward the west-northwest at 32 km/h and was expected to remain on this course. Hurricane force winds extended out 64 kilometres in all directions from the center. Gale force winds extended outward 270 kilometres to the north of the center and 160 kilometres to the south.

On Jamaica, a resort island about the size of Connecticut and with a population of 2.1 million, officials of the Office of Disaster Preparedness called emergency planning sessions to set up shelters.

Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley assured his people emergency plans were being made and offered his country's help to eastern Caribbean islands already struck by Allen's fury.

Advance winds from Allen began to hit Santo Domingo, heavily damaged by Hurricane David last year. Wind-hurled debris damaged roads in the bayfront area of the city and heavy rains flooded streets in San Cristobal, 16 kilometres west of the capital city of a million people.

Court tells Alcan to obey Ottawa on water flow

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Aluminum Co. of Canada must obey a federal order to release more water into the Nechako River, Mr. Justice Thomas Berger of B.C. Supreme Court ruled today.

Berger said in an eight-page judgment, on a request by the federal government for an injunction, that the government has shown it has a right under the Fisheries Act to make such an order.

"Alcan has not flouted the law," the judge wrote. "It has simply said, on legal advice, that it believes the minister's order is unconstitutional.

"I have reached the conclusion, however, that Alcan must obey . . . there will be an order directing Alcan to comply with the minister's directive."

Berger said the dispute was one which could not be swiftly or easily resolved but he said someone must have the power to determine the discharges of water that will be necessary.

"The question is whether the minister or Alcan should exercise that power. The minister represents the public interest. The power ultimately must be his."

Berger said an additional matter was that the order purports to regulate discharges of water through the Skins Lake spillway until June 30, 1981, with rates of discharge laid down in advance for the whole period.

He said the 8,000 cubic feet a second discharge for the period ending Aug. 20, the time with which the injunction was concerned, seems to be reasonable to protect the fish and flood the spawning grounds.

Berger said if it appears the discharges required by the minister after Aug. 20 are unnecessary, the order would not be in force.

Murder story in contest may be the real thing

TORONTO (CP) — New York City police have appealed to The Star to help seek a man who may have committed a brutal murder and then sent the paper a story about it.

Robert Callan, an investigator with the police, appealed to The Star last week following an anonymous entry into the newspaper's annual short story contest.

The story, entitled Motiveless Murder Relic, tells how the author cut the throat of a woman he had gagged and handcuffed in a basement apartment in 1977. The location is New York City, where of 1,557 murders recorded that year, 650 have not been solved.

As one of hundreds submitted to The Star, the story was so realistic that the newspaper consulted several psychiatrists and a psychic as well as sending it to New York City Police. Because Callan is one of 50 investigators working on the murder of Canadian violinist Helen Mintiks and has been ordered to remain on the Mintiks case, it may be a while before he has a chance to check the authenticity of the story.

"I pulled the knife through her throat," it begins, before going on to describe the sights and sounds with accuracy that startles medical experts.

"He certainly has some anatomical knowledge of what happens if you cut someone's throat," said one doctor.

After describing how the life ebbed from his victim's body, the author says he removed his rubber gloves, showered the blood off his body and took a bath.

In the six-page text, the author describes his life, his schooling and his best friend, a dog, which was shot by his father. References in the story describe the author as 30 years old at the time of the murder — Dec. 31, 1977 — and staying on the 7th floor of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. Another reference says the author arrived in the city a week earlier.

The only clue to his personal life is revealed during the paragraphs analyzing the reasons for the murder. He refers to the "bottomless perdition of a too early marriage" he once fell into.

Two of three psychiatrists consulted by The Star believed the story was only the product of someone's imagination rather than a genuine case of murder.

But Dr. Jerry Cooper, a Toronto psychiatrist who has been consulted on 30 to 50 murders a year from all over Ontario, says the strong feelings evident in the story could be those of an "explosive" individual.

"Whoever wrote this definitely has something wrong with him unless he is a creative genius," says Cooper.

Brampton psychic Geraldine Smith, currently working on a murder case in Los Angeles, said she believes the story is true, after it was read to her over the phone. Ms. Smith says she detects names and descriptions concerning the case but senses the author has committed suicide.

Swim, pedal, run!

Lower Island athletes held off the Mainlanders and the Americans to win the men's and women's titles when Canada's first triathlon was staged Sunday at Elk Lake.

Eddie Smyth of Colwood was the first man home and Dawn Wilson of Victoria was the women's winner of the gruelling swim-pedal-run contest that drew 59 entrants from B.C., Washington and Oregon.

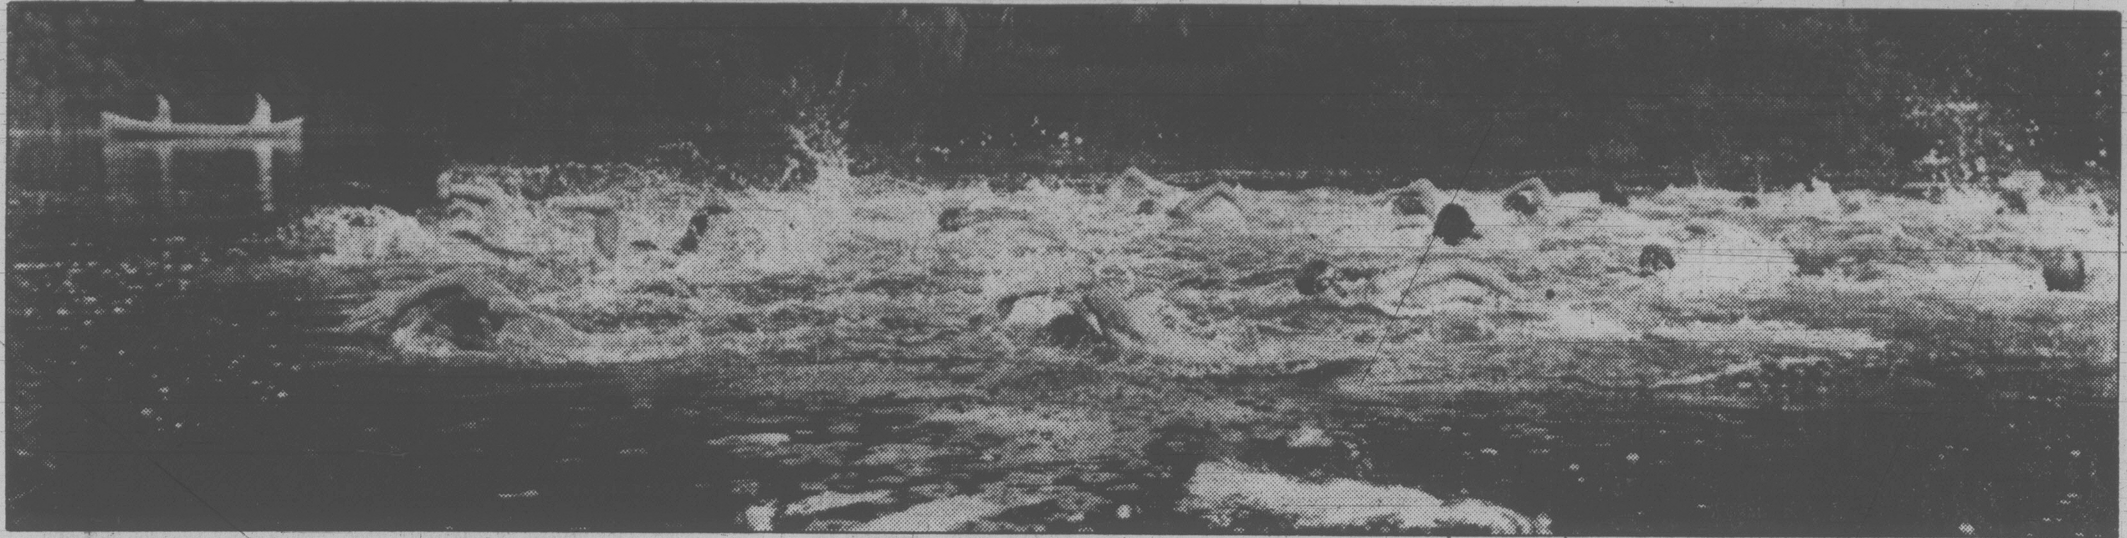
Organized by the Sri Chinmoy meditation centre's running club and patterned after similar events held in Connecticut and Hawaii, the triathlon involved a one-mile swim (the start below) in Elk Lake, a 20-mile cycle race and finally a six-mile run.

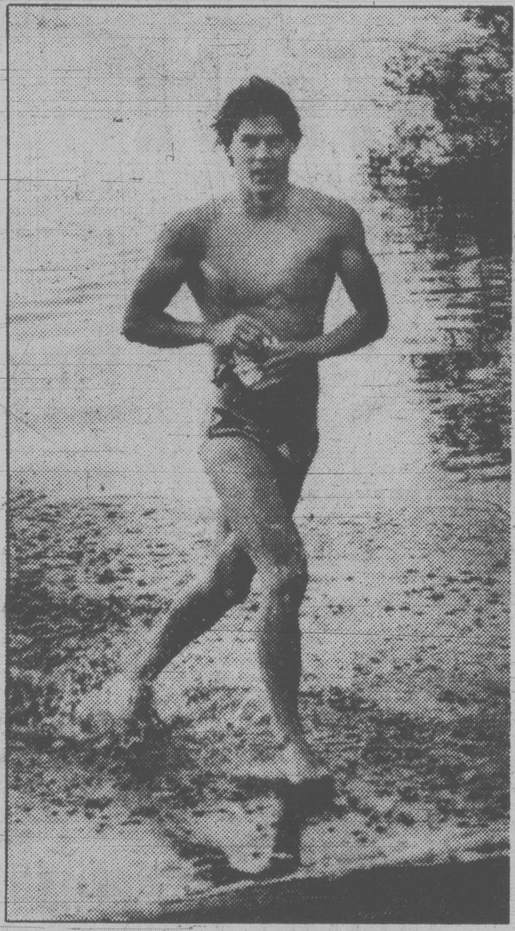
Smyth completed all three legs in just over two hours to finish ahead of Hugh Wilson of Vancouver, who was second, and Victoria's Bob Noble, who placed third, while Dawn Wilson was the fastest of seven women entered, covering the course in just under two and-a-half hours.

Meet director Dale Erven of the Sri Chinmoy club was delighted with the country's first triathlon and said today he hopes it will become an annual event.

Over-all men's winner Eddie Smyth of Colwood —2 hours, one minute and 11 seconds

Women's winner Dawn Wilson of Victoria —2 hours, 28 minutes and 49 seconds





Bob Noble of Victoria — 3rd over-all

Hugh Wilson of Vancouver — 2nd over-all

TOWN TALK

Talk of the city soliciting funds from Soochow, China to help Victoria in its Chinatown revitalization program is nothing but press speculation, Ald. Bob Wright said today.

Responding to a letter to the editor of the Times chiding the city for its supposedly greedy attitude towards its new twin city, Wright said it just wasn't true.

"Reporters put two and two together and got two," joked Ald. Bill McElroy.

"At no time has anyone or this committee had any discussion about trying to put the arm on Soochow for some dollars," Wright said.

However, the city is trying to put the arm on the Provincial Capital Commission, Wright said, and McElroy — a PCC member — said there will probably be some good news for the city when it meets later this month.

When Kay Keister drove past Shady Creek United Church while visiting Victoria she immediately knew it was the perfect setting for her wedding.

So Kay, from Fresno, Calif., phoned Rev. Ronald D. Johnstone of Victoria and asked him to perform the ceremony Aug. 14.

Johnstone readily agreed and it's all set.

Waterfront watchers filled their eyes on Dallas Road Sunday when the 8,424-square metre oil rig Ocean Bounty lumbered into view being towed by the tug Smit Rotterdam.

More than 300 feet tall, the oil rig, owned by Odeco Co. of New Orleans, La., has just completed a multi-million dollar refit in Nanoose Bay, carried out by about 80 employees of Vancouver Shipyards Co. Ltd.

After dropping off a Pacific Pilotage pilot, the tug and oil rig headed out to sea. Travelling via the Straits of Magellan, the oil rig's destination is the North Sea.

Prior to the refit, the Ocean Bounty was working off Alaska.

Everybody knows about Star Wars. Now we have Star Parties.

The parties are initiated by members of the Victoria Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada. The idea is members take along their telescopes and invite the public to share their viewings.

Vice-president Leo VanderByl says the next party is slated for about 9 p.m. this Saturday.

The place: the parking lot on Dallas Road across from the flag pole in Beacon Hill Park — that is, if the skies are clear.

A whirlwind visit was paid to Victoria today by one of the United States' top naval officers.

Admiral R.L. Long arrived at the Victoria International Airport shortly after noon to confer with Rear-Admiral Michael Martin, commander maritime forces Pacific.

Long, based at Pearl Harbor, is commander-in-chief Pacific and in charge of all naval forces along the U.S. west coast and into the Indian Ocean.

A Canadian armed forces spokesman said Long is here to discuss "common concerns" with Martin. He leaves for Hawaii at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Disabled freighter towed in

The grain-laden freighter T. Akasawa was to anchor at Royal Roads at noon today after being towed from Cape Flattery by the tugs Seaspan Master and Seaspan Navigator.

Owned by C.P. Ships of Hamilton, Bermuda, the 57,140 deadweight tonne freighter was on her way from Vancouver to Japan on Monday when she became disabled.

A spokesman for King Bros. Ltd. said she will be unable to come alongside the dock for examination because with her full cargo she draws 40 feet.

Suds go stadium-wide

Beer: desegregation

Beer drinkers have been so well-mannered in their segregated quarters at Royal Athletic Park that aldermen decided today to extend the privilege to all parts of the city-owned stadium.

"There have been no incidents of rowdiness or misuse of the privilege granted by council and it has helped to eliminate the problem of spectators bringing their own supplies into the park by devious ways and means," city recreation director Jack Morgan said.

Council on June 26 allowed the consumption of beer in a small section of the stands, after learning the practice of allowing beer to be drunk only in a small area underneath the bleachers was not working.

Morgan told council's parks and recreation committee that since imbibers were allowed in the cheap seats, more than 2,000 bottles of beer have been sold for total sales of $2,500. The city keeps the profits — Morgan did not say what the city's net proceeds were.

Aldermen approved extension of beer drinking to the rest of the stadium for a 30-day test. Beer sales are also restricted to Victoria Budgets' softball and Victoria Blues' baseball games.

In other business, council's land use planning committee extended the successful Chinatown paint-up program to three buildings outside the three-block area designated by council last fall.

Ramsay Machine Works at the foot of Fisgard, the Station Hotel at Pandora and Station and B.C. Produce Co. at 529 Pandora will receive matching funds and help from city staff on design and color schemes to clean up the exterior of their buildings.

Chief city planner Geoff Greenhalgh said the program, established with a $30,000 city fund last year, has been highly successful.

"There's been an excellent response to the paint-up scheme," he told the committee.

To date, $19,256 has been spent by the city, matching equal amounts from building owners.

Greenhalgh said it is important that the machine shop be include in the program because it will form the backdrop to the Gate of Harmonious Interest to be built at Fisgard and Government.

N-protest to balloon at Comox on Saturday

Aug. 9, 1945. Nagasaki, Japan. A United States warplane drops "Fat Man," the world's second operational atomic bomb.

Almost instantly, 75,000 people are dead, disfigured or doomed to a lifetime of radiation disease.

This Saturday is the 35th anniversary of the Nagasaki blast and organizers of a memorial protest at the Comox base of the Canadian Armed Forces hope 500 to 800 people will show up.

Demonstrators are expected from the Lower Mainland and many Vancouver Island points.

Organizing the event on the lower Island is Edith Adamson, a 66-year-old grandmother and spokesman for the Victoria Coalition for Disarmament.

Adamson wants any Victorians heading for the demonstration to meet in the Town and Country shopping centre parking lot at 9:30 a.m., the day of the protest.

"Then there will be a cavalcade to Comox," Adamson said.

She expects the 2 p.m. demonstration to be fairly brief.

Hundreds of helium-filled balloons will be released to give some inkling of how far nuclear fallout would spread if Comox was a target for an atom bomb.

Each balloon will contain a card asking the finder to mail the card to the protest organizers so that a theoretical spread of fallout can be established.

From the base, the demonstrators will make their way to Lewis Park in Courtenay where speakers can have their say.

Federal government reprentatives have been invited, Adamson said.

"But if they don't come we'll stage a puppet show," she added.

The stars of such a show would be Canada's own Punch and Judy — Pierre Trudeau and Joe Clark.

Adamson points out that Trudeau won world acclaim when he first announced years ago nuclear weapons would be removed from bases at Bagotville, Que., Chatham, N.B., and Comox.

The nuclear weapons were removed from Bagotville and Chatham but Comox still has them.

Trudeau has suggested they would be removed after the new F-18A fighter plane arrives to replace the obsolete Voodoo CF-101.

But in the recent alert that had seven Voodoos scrambling from Comox (it turned out to be a computer error and the planes were recalled by NORAD in six minutes), no planes carried nuclear weapons.

If the nuclear weapons weren't used by the Voodoos in a genuine alert, Adamson wonders why they haven't been removed from Comox as Trudeau promised.

Petunias, marigolds, zinnias and early chysanthemums now in full bloom at the Floralies Internationales

Floralies a mosaic of living color

elizabeth forbes

"A mosaic of living color!"

Those words come easily when you visit the Floralies Internationales outdoor display at Montreal, as I did in mid-July.

Combined with an indoor Floralies during the month of May, this is the first exhibition ever held in North America, where the great horticultural traditions of the main continents have been united in a single presentation.

The outdoor site on Ile Notre-Dame was originally created, with its ornamental lakes and canals, for Expo 67.

Until the mid-70s it formed a part of Man and His World. Then, with deterioration of a number of the pavilions that project was gradually phased out and the site was more or less neglected.

Chosen for the 1980 outdoor Floralies, it now features 44 different displays of flowers, trees and ornamental shrubs, bulbs, evergreens, annuals and perennials, rose bushes, fruit trees and vegetables.

There are horticultural landscapes and flower beds, educational and scientific exhibits, children's and community gardens.

Some nations are presenting entertainment programs with their displays, others are staging conferences and meetings relating to the general theme of Floralies.

Concerts, theatre and fine arts exhibitions have also been mounted and there are a number of excellent restaurants, snack bars and garden cafes.

Participating countries include Austria, Belgium, Canada, Czechoslovakia, France, Holland, Italy, Mexico, Peru, Portugal, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Four provinces — Quebec, Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia — have displays and there are many interesting presentations from cities, towns, districts and villages in the province of Quebec.

To achieve this tremendous effect, five of the original Expo 67 pavilions were demolished — Greece, Israel, Trinidad-Tobago, the Atlantic provinces and a theme pavilion.

Seven others have been totally or partially restored — France, Great Britain, Quebec, Jamaica and the Christian, United Nations and Indians of Canada pavilions.

When the exhibition closes, on the first day of September, the whole area will be declared a floral park and will be maintained from then on by the City of Montreal.

During my few hours at Floralies, I was whisked about in a two-seat electric cart by a young horticulture student named Lucie, one of many exhibition guides.

Canada's exhibit, featuring our national landscape, from sea to sea, includes a meadow with all kinds of wild flowers; a peat bog with skeleton trees, surrounded by acquatic plants and water lilies to give some color; rock formations where you see lichens in various stages of growth and a polygonal garden of grass and moss.

Highlight is an alpine garden with waterfalls, in a setting of rare conifers, moraine and grass.

Quebec, as the host province, has a display in the heart of the exhibition, jutting out into one of the ornamental lakes.

Created by members of the Montreal Botanical Gardens, in co-operation with the provincial department of agriculture and the city of Montreal, its major point of interest is a replica of a habitant home of yesteryear, in a grove of maple trees.

There is also a series of rock gardens, displays of sun, mountain, woodland and acquatic plants, sand and clay ground trees and delicate ferns.

This exhibit is surrounded by multi-colored iris, theme flower of Floralies 1980.

France, awarded grand prize of honor for best international entry in the outdoor exhibition, has used thousands of flowers in its presentation — chrysanthemums, lilies, marigolds, pinks and roses.

The United Kingdom, third in the international category after Italy, has seven theme areas fanning out from a centrepiece named Queen Mother's Rose Garden, a tribute to Her Majesty in her 80th birthday year.

Roses, as you will guess, are very much in evidence, but there is also an herb garden and a mixed hedge of plants that attract bees and butterflies.

Theme chosen by the United States is improving quality of life in an urban environment and all plants, shrubs, trees, ferns and flowers used have, in common, a great tolerance for tough urban conditions.

There are masses of perennials and a recreational area for children where the horticultural products are of a more resistant quality.

Grand prize of honor for national participation went to Ontario.

Dominant feature is the province logo made of living plants and colored stones, surrounded by annuals of all kinds. There is also an arboretum of southern Ontario trees and shrubs.

Design and work for this site was undertaken by students at the Niagara Parks Commission School of Horticulture, in co-operation with the province's ministry of agriculture and food.

British Columbia's display includes a loggia created from the trunks of cedar trees and a series of gardens arranged around a Thunderbird totem.

There are grassy slopes and displays of shrubs and trees native to this province as well as some from other countries that have been successfully transplanted over the years and that now thrive in British Columbia soil.

Postscript: Twenty-one countries had exhibits at the indoor Floralies, held in the month of May.

For that event Montreal's Olympic Veledrome was transformed into a valley of flowers by horticulturists from around the world.

Displays included cut flowers, flowering plants, tropical and sub-tropical plants, ornamental trees and shrubs, cacti, bonsai, presentations of floral art, dried flowers and original floral arrangements.
